WOMAN AND HER HOME.

Paris design for a Bridal Dress.

"GRASS AND GLOVES."

By D.M.L.

"When the grass is soft as the breast of doves,
And shivering-sweet to the touch;
O, why do you walk through the fields in gloves,
Missing so much and so much?"

A REAL lover of the country will readily understand the gust of impatience that called forth the little poem from which I have quoted, and the name of whose author I have forgotten. But one would hesitate to go as far as does the poet in condemning the lady who walked through the fields in gloves, as a "fat white woman, whom nobody loves," especially as, we are told, she was but glimpsed from the window of a railway carriage.

The nature lover in the hot stuffy train evidently looked out at the green fields starred with "ox-eyed" daisies, and trembling with brown "quaky" grasses, and the sight of a woman who walked among all these splendours with gloves upon her hands, seemed to arouse an unreasonably large amount of annoyance.

But then imagine encasing one's hands in hot, tight coverings, when one might pluck a bunch of great starry daisies, and loosely hold the cool stems. Or touch the meadow grasses that sway with the gentlest breath of the summer air, and are "soft as the breast of doves."

Almost as soon go through the sun-bathed fields with one's ears hermetically sealed, while the grasshoppers raise a drowsy chorus and the lark drops, pulsing with song, to the lowly unprotected nest. Or wear a bandage across one's eyes to shut out the sight of the golden mass of bloom upon the furze and the silver birches with all their delicate lace work of palest green. There is endless delight in the "feel" of things in the fields, as well as in the sights and sounds that charm us, when young summer shakes out her green garments and airs them in the warm, bright sunshine.

Then let us not be among those who do not appreciate these things, and who, therefore, "are missing so much, and so much."

HOW TO GET BARGAINS.

"I simply must go to the sales!" has been a commonplace remark during the past few weeks, and as a rule it is obvious that the speaker has no definite object in view. The writer, who has visited most of the big shops in London and Dublin, has formed the opinion that in nine cases out of ten the prospective buyer has no particular article or idea in mind when entering the stores. Her one idea is to get a bargain.

By the way, what is a bargain? An article is not necessarily a bargain because it is low in price. I know dozens of women who have bought all sorts of odd articles at sales and put them away because "they would come in useful some time." Occasionally they have been of service, but as a general rule they have deteriorated in value before they were required, or else they were given away or sold for less than the purchaser paid for them.

A bargain is an article which can be used in the near future, that can be bought at less than the usual retail price. For instance, good linen or cotton sheets marked a few shillings below the ordinary in figure are bargains, but evening gowns, originally twelve guineas, and marked down to six guineas at the end of the season, usually are not. Such gowns are invariably soiled, and consequently must be cleaned before use. It is always problematical whether a garment will shrink or lose its line in the process of cleaning, and should this happen—where is the bargain? It frequently happens that such a gown remains unsold at the end of the season because it is very extreme in fashion, or because the colour is bizarre, or for some similar reason.

The wise shopper will study the advertisements, make a list of articles she needs at the moment or will surely need during the winter months, and then starts out determined to buy those things and no others.

It is to the woman with a family, who is clever with her needle, that the sale-time makes the safest appeal. These clever needlewomen pick up oddments that can be made up into dresses, odd skirts and coats for themselves and their children at very much below the usual cost.

There are, undoubtedly, bargains to be had at the sales, but the woman who benefits most is the one who has studied the advertised list in advance, and who keeps to her selection of essential articles.

The answer is—"The Lemon!"

LEMON JUICE AS A BLOOD PURIFIER

Evelyn Cook, the "Daily Express" food Expert, writes:—

"Now is the season when people are run down, and you hear much talk of tonics, and homely disquisitions on blood purifiers and so forth. An old woman's recipe for the blood is lemon juice, and modern science is proving that this ancient prescription has good foundation. Lemon juice is an appetiser, and to be commended to women who study their complexions. An excellent and pleasant way of introducing lemon juice into the system is by way of lemon marmalade at breakfast."

Because of its wonderful health-giving value the Lemon is of all fruits our best friend.

Nature supplies the Lemon—'Silver Shred' is the pleasant way of taking it.

YESTERDAY'S CASES IN THE COURTS.

ARKLOW MAN'S ESTATE.

MAN WHO KEPT HIS OWN COFFIN.

Before Mr. Justice Sullivan and a special jury, the probate action of Brennan and another v. Dillon and another came on for hearing. The plaintiffs, Arthur B. Brennan and Arthur Byrne, of Main street, Arklow, claim as executors of the will of Denis Kavanagh, of Main street, Arklow, publican, deceased (dated 17th November, 1923), to have the will admitted to probate. The defendants, Elizabeth Dillon and Kathleen English, of Wexford street, Arklow, daughters of the deceased, contested the will on the usual statutory grounds, and alleged that the deceased had made his true will in June, 1919, which was never revoked by him.

Mr. P. Lynch, K.C., who, with Mr. E. A. Swayne, K.C., and Mr. C. T. Matheson (instructed by Messrs. Huggard and Brennan), appeared for the plaintiffs, said that Denis Kavanagh died on the 7th February of this year. His will was duly attested, and the only question was whether he was a competent testator. He had three children, one of whom was a son, who was the real plaintiff as the principal beneficiary, who assisted him in every way until he went to Terenure College. When the son was 21 or 22 years of age he emigrated to America, and returned in 1913 to Arklow. He had been coming and going from America, married there in 1919, and returned to Ireland with his wife; but owing to her ill-health they had to return in the fall of that year. There were two daughters; one married in January, 1923, a pensioner from the American Army, and the second daughter, Kathleen, married in 1919. She did not tell her father about her marriage, and the first that he knew about it was when he saw her walking up the street after the ceremony. Her husband was a teacher in Arklow. The assets consisted of the public-house, with stock returned at £460; but when the son, Thomas, returned from America to take up possession the only thing of real value that he found in it was a bottle of whiskey. The testator owed in debts about £600. He had cattle and various property amounting to about £400, and a small farm of land near the town and two houses. It was said that he had bought his coffin and had it for a couple of years before he died. "Well," said counsel, "some of them were aware that Bianconi had his coffin under his bed for ten years, and Mr. Kavanagh's father had his own coffin for two years."

Mr. Philip J. Godfrey, from the office of Messrs. Huggard and Brennan, stated that he drew up the will of Denis Kavanagh, who told him that he was worth four or five thousand pounds. He referred to the matches that his daughters made, saying that Mr. Dillon was out to have a good time and Mr. English would not work as hard as he would like. He said that his son was a very hard-working boy, and he only wanted to leave Mrs. Dillon £30 and Mrs. English £10. He wished to give £5 to the parish priest for Masses and £5 to Father O'Regan, also for Masses, and £5 to the Catholic curate attending the sick poor in the district, and the remainder of everything that he had he wished to go to his son. When Mr. Kavanagh had signed the will in presence of witness and Miss Farrer, he took out what he said was his old will and burned it in the stove in the office. At the reading of the will after the funeral Mrs. Dillon remarked that she knew she was "done" from the day he came back from Gorey, and Mrs. English said that she was surprised that he gave her so much as £10.

In reply to Mr. Wood, K.C., who, with Mr. O'Donnell (instructed by Mr. D. H. O'Leary, Arklow), appeared for the defendants, the witness said that the testator fully understood what the will meant.

Dr. Patrick J. Hamilton, of Arklow, said that he had been deceased's medical attendant. He always looked upon him as a very capable, shrewd and intelligent man of business, a man who had "made good." His mind was as bright as ever up to about five days before his death. He told him one day that he got his coffin made, kept it in the yard, and wanted to show it to him; but witness told him he was in a hurry and could not wait to see it. (Laughter.) He told him he had a grievance against the local undertakers and wanted a good oak coffin for himself. (Laughter.)

To Mr. Wood—The diabetes from which he suffered might react upon his mind, his memory and power of perception. His daughter, Mrs. Dillon, attended to the business during his illness.

Canon J. Breen stated, in reply to Mr. Lynch, that he knew the deceased to be a good judge of temporal affairs. He was a man of good intellect and a slave at hard work in his young days.

Questioned by Mr. Wood—He would not say that deceased was eccentric, but he was a man who wanted his own way.

Mary Doyle, who had been engaged as shop assistant to the deceased, swore that he was a very keen, upright man and quite competent to deal with his affairs.

Thomas Kavanagh, brother of the late Denis Kavanagh, corroborated the previous evidence as to the latter's shrewdness and fitness to transact business up to the time of his illness.

Thomas B. Kavanagh, principal beneficiary under his father's will, swore that he did not know the contents of the will before his father's death.

To Mr. Wood—Mrs. Dillon worked for her father all her life. He had got a valuation of his father's assets which put them now at about £2,000.

The further hearing of the case was adjourned until 11 o'clock this morning.

ARNOTT V. ARNOTT.

In the Chancery Division yesterday, before Mr. Justice Murnaghan, the hearing was continued of the action of Arnott v. Arnott, which was brought by the plaintiffs, Sir John A. Arnott, Bart., and Mrs. Rosina Johnson, his sister, against the defendant, Lady Emily Jane FitzGerald Arnott, for the purpose of having her removed as trustee from the trusts of the will of her husband, the late Sir John Arnott, Bart., and also for the purpose of having Loftus Percival Arnott, or some other fit and proper person, appointed a trustee in her stead, and directing the defendant to execute and do all acts and things necessary for carrying out that purpose.

Mr. S. L. Brown, K.C., Mr. H. Wilson, K.C., and Mr. Marnan (instructed by Messrs. Casey, Clay and Collins) appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Jellett, K.C., Mr. Overend, K.C., and Mr. R. H. Ryland (instructed by Mr. A. McCracken) for the defendant.

The evidence in the case had concluded on Wednesday.

Mr. Overend, addressing his lordship on behalf of the defendant, submitted that there was no reason whatever shown why his client should be removed from the position of trustee. Pointing out that during the period that Lady FitzGerald Arnott had acted as trustee the management of the estate had been admittedly magnificent, with the result that the property had been greatly enhanced in value, he asked how, therefore, could it be said that the defendant had injured the estate in any way. This, he said, was really an action by one trustee against another trustee to remove the other trustee from the trust. The beneficiaries had given no evidence in support of the plaintiffs' case here whatever.

Mr. Wilson—There is one beneficiary who is a co-plaintiff.

Mr. Overend—Yes, but she is only a nominal co-plaintiff. This was a matter, he said, which required very serious consideration. He asked his lordship to take into consideration the equitable character of her position. Having dealt with the different matters with reference to which evidence had been given, he said that there was nothing whatever to show that the defendant had failed to exercise the duty of trustee of the estate improperly. The worst that could be said against her was that she was over-zealous in looking after the estate in the interests of herself and her children.

During all those twenty-six years, his lordship would observe, the Court had not made any order directing the defendant to do any act as trustee which it was her duty to do and which she refused to do. What, then, was the real reason for removing her from the trust? What he suggested and submitted was, that what was in the mind of the plaintiff was to get rid of the defendant, not because of any necessity at all, but in order that he might not be prevented from pursuing the line of conduct that he pursued in the case of the Irish Times. He had stated in his evidence that he thought he was acting in conformity with the trusts of the will in altering the articles of association, and his object was to prevent Lady FitzGerald Arnott having control. He wanted to get rid of her, so that she might not have control after his death.

Was not that, asked counsel, really what he was at in this action? As Lady FitzGerald Arnott had stated—she might have been over-zealous—she was only anxious that everything in connection with the estate should be right and seeing that everything was right.

REPLY FOR PLAINTIFFS.

Mr. Herbert Wilson, K.C., on behalf of the plaintiffs, said that his clients expressed deep regret at the necessity for these proceedings, and at having to occupy the time of the Court for four or five days in considering a matter which was essentially between members of a family, and which should never have been dragged into a public court. It was not the wish of Sir John Arnott that this action should be taken or that the matters between himself and Lady FitzGerald Arnott should be discussed in the light of a public court. The matter was forced upon him, and his lordship saw, from the attitude of the defendant in the witness box on the previous day, that this action was necessary. It would have been far better if the defendant had seen her way to retire from the trusts of the will and to let matters continue as they did for the last twenty-five years, but she did not. She determined, by persistent obstruction, to make this action necessary, and to have all these details brought before the Court in the manner that they had heard for the last few days.

Mr. Jellett and Mr. Overend had right through persisted in saying that this was an action by one trustee against another trustee. That was not the case. They should look to the pleadings, in which it was made perfectly clear that Sir John Arnott was suing as trustee and beneficiary; and to prevent any doubt that he was suing in his capacity as beneficiary it was thought better to join with him one of the legatees, Mrs. Johnson. Mr. Overend thought that the other beneficiaries should be there and should be examined in that very sordid case. The late Sir John Arnott had twelve children, including the two plaintiffs; and the suggestion was that the other ten children should be there to show that they were satisfied with the administration of the estate. Counsel would not take that responsibility. He thought that there were quite enough in the case, and that it was perfectly unnecessary to drag other members of the family into a case in which their mother or stepmother might be attacked in court there.

The origin of this unfortunate trouble went back to the death of Sir John Arnott in 1898, and his lordship would have to draw a mental picture of the circumstances existing at that time. Sir John Arnott was a great and successful merchant in Cork, and had many irons in the fire; and it was necessary that there should be somebody on his death to continue the management of his commercial concerns and business affairs, either indefinitely or until it became possible to administer the estate for the benefit of his large family. He had also his wife—a lady then in the prime of life and of great capacity—and he was determined that he would not slight that lady by anything that he said in his will, which was prepared in the most careful manner; and he realised that, no matter how much he might respect his wife, for her benefit and for the benefit of the children he was leaving behind him it was necessary to protect the estate by giving almost autocratic power to the one member of his family who was able to attend to matters successfully. The success of these commercial undertakings and the management of the estate by Sir John A. Arnott had been proved in a remarkable way.

For two or three months after the death of Sir John Arnott matters went on in a perfectly friendly way between Lady FitzGerald Arnott and her stepson, Sir John A. Arnott. Then there was a bolt from the blue. In October, 1898, Lady FitzGerald Arnott learned for the first time that there was a clause in her late husband's will which took away from her any power that she might have in the management of the estate. Counsel could well understand her feelings at that time, never having contemplated that such a course would be taken by her husband; but there was the will, and the will was to be construed in court in case of any doubt or difficulty; and so, acting on the best legal advice that she could get, she went to the Court of Chancery to place an interpretation on Clause 18 of the will, of which they had heard so much in the course of these proceedings. The decision of the Master of the Rolls was that under that clause of the will all the power and authority of the management and administration of the estate were vested in Sir John Arnott as if he were sole trustee. When the Master of the Rolls gave that decision friction at once arose, and from the evidence it appeared that from that time Lady FitzGerald Arnott had not spoken to her co-trustee. She had never acquiesced in the decision of the Master of the Rolls, and the previous day, when examined, she said that she claimed the right to be consulted by Sir John Arnott in any matter concerning the trust. She also stated that she did not trust her co-trustee.

Counsel then dealt with the case before the Master of the Rolls in 1904, in which the judgment of 1899 was reaffirmed, and said that from 1904 to 1917 Mount Etna was not in eruption: the fires for some reason were banked, and Cyclops slept at the forge. In 1917 the trouble broke out again on the question of putting money into War Loan, and it became necessary to go to court. On 16th July an order was made by Judge Barton. Lady FitzGerald Arnott, having done what was necessary, and notwithstanding the appeal of counsel, the judge refused to give her costs out of the estate, but he did not ask her to pay any. She then sought to thwart her co-trustee by refusing to sign cheques in 1919, and in 1920 by refusing to sign an order for the transfer of documents from the Provincial Bank, Cork, to the Provincial Bank, Dublin. The matter again came before the court, and she was ordered to sign the documents and pay costs. In May, 1923, she wrote a letter challenging the validity of Clause 18 of the will, which she stated emphatically was forged, and that she was prepared to prove it. Having regard to that letter, counsel asked, what course was open to Sir John Arnott—having regard to his position as trustee and having regard to the decision of Sir Andrew Porter—but to take proceedings? Accordingly proceedings were instituted on May 16th, 1923.

The charge of forgery against a co-trustee was a very serious matter. Two trustees could not get along very well if one charged the other with forgery. One would have thought, when matters had gone so far and came into court, that when the one who accused the other of forgery repented, withdrew the charge, and recanted, there would be an earlier intimation to the other trustee of such recantation. But for four days there was no such intimation until the previous evening, when the defendant in the witness box suddenly withdrew the charge of forgery. Whether she did that on advice or conscientiously, counsel did not know, but it was a great deal too late now. She said that she did not trust Sir John Arnott, and that certain documents "were slipped in" for her signature, and she, in fact, brought a charge of conspiracy against the late Mr. Guest Lane, solicitor, and Sir John Arnott of trying to defraud her in some way.

Counsel then dealt with what he described as the sending of shocking postcards by the defendant to Sir John Arnott, postcards casting aspersions on the character of her co-trustee. How a person guilty of such conduct thought that she should be allowed to continue to act under the trusts of the will, counsel did not know. He submitted that there was overwhelming evidence that she should be removed from the trusteeship. The policy adopted by the defence was that of striking back, and they brought as many charges as they could—which Mr. Jellett had characterised as a fraud—against Sir John Arnott. As regards the shares of the Bristol Steamship Company, the price of £3 10s. each which Sir John Arnott agreed to pay for them was based on a valuation having regard to the earnings of the company for a few preceding years. Then there was the Irish Times. A charge was made that Sir John Arnott attempted to foist the Irish Times shares on the defendant and her children; but from her letter it appeared that she was perfectly willing to take them. It was only valued at £132,000 for probate, but two years afterwards it was floated as a company with a capital of £450,000, the public subscribing the amount five times over. That was a charge of fraud that counsel did not understand, and he was sure that his lordship would come to the conclusion that there was nothing in it.

Counsel then dealt briefly with the counterclaim, and concluded by quoting a decision of the Lord Chancellor of England in 1682 in a case of Urdale v. Ettrich.

Mr. Justice Murnaghan reserved judgment.

DUBLIN JUNCTION RAILWAYS.

STEAM PACKET COMPANY'S APPLICATION.

Before Mr. Justice Murnaghan, the hearing was commenced of an action in which the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company sought a declaration that the Dublin and South-Eastern Railway Company, the defendants, were bound to account for the total gross receipts of the City of Dublin Junction Railways, as provided for by agreements; a declaration that the gross and net receipts of the railways are to be ascertained and distributed as provided by the said agreements, and for consequential orders.

The defendants denied that the agreements referred to constituted one agreement in substance, or that for all or any purposes material to the action the agreements regulated the mutual liabilities of the plaintiffs and the defendants, as alleged, or at all. They disputed claims made by the plaintiffs, stated that sums payable by the defendants to the junction railways were limited in the manner described by them, and that the propriety and adequacy of such sums so paid could not be questioned by the plaintiffs.

Mr. Brown, K.C., Mr. Wilson, K.C., and Mr. Poole (instructed by Mr. J. P. Ringwood) appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Serjeant Hanna, K.C., Mr. Swayne, K.C., and Mr. E. J. Kelly (instructed by Messrs. T. F. O'Connell and Son) for the defendants.

The case had not concluded when the Court rose.

DAMAGES AGAINST CAVAN MAN.

Before Mr. Justice Johnston and a common jury, an action was heard in which Philip Farrelly, of Correagh, Co. Cavan, claimed £1,000 damages against Hugh Brady, of Coppenagh, Cavan, farmer and cattle dealer, for the alleged seduction of his daughter, Margaret Farrelly.

The defence was a denial of the allegation.

Mr. Geoghegan (instructed by Messrs. Louis C. P. Smith and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Lardner, K.C., and Mr. Martin Maguire (instructed by Messrs. Cochrane and Co.) for the defendant.

The jury found in favour of the plaintiff and assessed the damages at £700.

Judgment was entered accordingly for the plaintiff, with costs.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

A SAVANT'S LIFE-STORY.

Sir Archibald Geikie, six years ago, at the age of eighty-three, began to write his autobiography, partly, he tells us, at the persuasion of his family, and partly to satisfy that insatiable love of activity which always belonged to his character. Sir Archibald was knighted in 1891, but he was already an eminent geologist thirty years before that. When most of us were boys the name of Geikie summed up all that could be known of the science of the earth. We thought of that name as we thought of Euclid—something classic and impersonal, outsoaring criticism; and it is almost a little difficult to realise that the author of the text-books which were venerable in our schooldays is still among us, wielding no wearied pen.

Sir Archibald's eminence is not due to his scientific authority alone. If his text-books still hold unchallenged primacy, it is not because no other scholar knows as much about the structure of the earth. It is because he has always written with a literary distinction. His clarity of presentation and the lucidity of his style have given his driest works a charm, communicating the beauty of nature and the enthusiasm of the scholar. The Scots, when they are men of science, do not despise the arts; and both Sir Archibald and his brother, the late James Geikie (who wrote poetry as well as geological studies) were masters of good writing. Hence it is not surprising that, in telling his life-story, Sir Archibald has given us a memorable and absorbing book. He has deliberately eschewed technical terms, though, of course, many a page describes scientific surveys and researches. An active and travelled life yields in his telling a delightful narrative.

Sir Archibald tells us that he remembers the opening of the first railway in Scotland, between Edinburgh and Glasgow, in the spring of 1842. "Before that time the two cities were connected by a coach-road and a canal. I recall the pleasure of an excursion on that canal, with the novel and delightful sensation of seeing fields, trees and cottages flit past . . . . with no feeling of movement in the horse-dragged barge wherein one was slowly borne along." He saw the memorial to Scott erected, and took part in the (now illegal) spearing of salmon by torchlight which is described in "Guy Mannering." He tells us of early visits to the Highlands with Celtic boatmen, and boyish impressions of that glorious scenery which was to become so familiar to him in later years when he explored those territories with a scientific eye. He earned the name of "Giolla nan Cloch"—the Lad of the Stones—by his curious chipping of rocks and collecting of specimens.

From 1855 to 1860 Sir Archibald was engaged in geological survey, and, like a true Scot, he mixed with his scientific studies a modicum of literature:—

> "I kept up Greek and Latin reading—Horace was still a constant companion—and in the course of years made myself familiar with some of the greater writers in English from Chaucer to our own day, devoting special attention to style. Having a retentive memory, in which were stored long passages from my favourite poets, I used to recite these pleno voce on the lonely moors; thus many a time, while starting a lapwing or curlew, shortening or at least enlivening, my solitary way to or from the ground that was under examination."

The Geological Survey of Scotland (1867-71) gave Geikie his opportunity, and his brilliant work won him the Chair of Geology in Edinburgh University. He met all the interesting people of those days—especially the Scots—and now gives us thumbnail sketches of Carlyle, the Stevensons, Dr. Brown and many another. As Director-General of the Geological Survey (from 1882 onwards) he often visited in Ireland One Sunday afternoon, not long after the Phœnix Park murders, he saw no fewer than five street "rows" in Dublin. Exploring County Cork, he was accompanied by an armed assistant, and in Donegal he once discovered a pyramid of discarded stills. In 1903 Sir Archibald left the Survey and became Secretary of the Royal Society; five years later he was President.

In the spring of 1914, Sir Archibald explored the Sabine Hills, and came to the conclusion that the valley of the Licenza marked Horace's vallis reducta. The Great War checked his Italian studies. In 1920 he presided over the Royal Commission of Inquiry into Dublin University, which reported that the existing resources were no longer adequate for the University's needs. A large increase from public funds was recommended, and "it remains," says Sir Archibald, "to be seen how far the Irish Free State will be disposed or able to carry out our recommendations."

A book to preserve and read again, is this: it will rank high among scientific autobiographies. H. B.

MR. G. B. SHAW.

As a distinguished critic observes, to attempt to judge the work of a contemporary is "a difficult and a delicate thing"; nevertheless, already numerous books have been published concerning Mr. George Bernard Shaw. Mr. Shanks designedly has refused to consult any of these, with the conspicuous exception of that by Mr. Archibald Henderson, to which he acknowledges profound and pervading obligations. Written sanely in a brisk and attractive manner, and supported by frequent quotation, his contribution is an excellent example of critical "much-in-little."

For greater clearness, the essay has been divided into five parts. "G.B.S."—so the opening chapter is entitled—is a fascinating character who, according to Mr. Shanks, scarcely could have been developed without the aid of the "New Journalism." The second chapter is headed "The Novelist and Critic." There are five novels, one of which, "Immaturity," has never been given to the world; a portion of the manuscript has been consumed by mice, but "even the mice would not persevere to the end." As our author reasons, Mr. Shaw, in first applying himself to the novel, was merely pursuing the line of least resistance. The jejuneness and rigidity of the novels cannot be explained away completely by the formal and florid language which, following tradition, the persons introduced had to speak. From the outset, Mr. Shaw cultivated a piercing style, and, in his opinions, was intensely original. He did not set about building upon the foundation raised in the domain of the novel, but temporarily left aside creative writing and won fame as a critic. In this capacity his proper element was the theatre, where much destructive work was necessary before constructive work might become practicable. However over-emphasised his criticism may have been, it was at all times informed by a genuine desire to "get something done."

The succeeding chapter deals with the drama of Mr. Shaw. Notwithstanding that he is instinctively and primarily a man of the theatre, he tried nothing for the stage until 1885, and not until 1892 did he bring anything to completion. This was "Widowers' Houses." "I had not achieved a success," affirms Mr. Shaw; "but I had provoked an uproar." Against the limitation of realism he revolts; and he purposes to "co-ordinate the essential facts of life into a system." From Tolstoy and Ibsen he differs widely in the possession of an inherent cheerfulness of disposition. The fourth chapter, "The Writer of Prefaces," describes "the argumentative Shaw." Most of his prefaces are simply pamphlets on topics of ordinary interest. Overcome by the idea that, on the whole, his view is correct, he is imbued with a resolution to compel his hearers to his way of thinking. The last chapter discusses Mr. Shaw as a philosopher. Mr. Shanks looks upon him as a truly religious man, "a prophet who has been induced to make use of a very unfortunate terminology." A short postscript is added on the new chronicle play, "Saint Joan."

LA BELLE PAMELA.

In this copious biography of her ancestress Miss Lucy Ellis, great-granddaughter of Lady FitzGerald, and Mr. Joseph Turquan draw an interesting and detailed picture of social life in many countries in the revolutionary period. We see the court of Versailles from the angle of the Palais Royal, headquarters of the Duc d'Orleans; we see the England of Horace Walpole, of Sheridan and Burke; and we get a delightfully pungent account of Irish life in the days of Grattan's Parliament.

The salon life, with its brilliant gaieties, its intriguing, letter-writing ladies, its disloyal, dissolute, plotting lords, gives our biographers material for much racy writing. Too much space is wasted on discussion of the origin of Pamela. Authentic documents show that she was the daughter of Philippe Egalité and Mme. de Genlis; the mass of supplementary evidence, mostly circumstantial, is unnecessary and unsavoury. Mme. de Genlis is not spared; she is represented as an ambitious, unscrupulous and false creature, planning to become the consort of the Duc d'Orleans when her schemes should bring him to the throne; and all the time that she thus intrigues and sins she is shown professing friendship for the duchess, and writing pious homilies. We read of the gatherings of the Palais Royal, where this crafty woman, her royal dupe, and a corrupt set hastened on the Revolution, in which their own plans went astray. We read how Egalité voted for the King's death, and how he and many of his followers came to suffer the same bloody fate while the rest fled as emigrés.

The story passes to England, where Mme. de Genlis seeks to entrap a husband for Pamela, having had the House of Leinster in mind even before she left France. Pamela's marriage with Lord Edward, however, proved something better than a mariage de convenance. Here is a glimpse of her in Irish society:—

> Lord Edward had married the daughter of the Duc d'Orleans and Mme. de Genlis, and felt all the contempt of the man of good birth for the opinion of common people, of the philosopher for prejudiced folk, and of a man of superior intellect for imbeciles and gossiping women. He did not regret his marriage, but the atmosphere of ill-will weighed on his mind; his young wife noticed it less, though she was sometimes annoyed by it, as at a ball to which she accompanied her sister-in-law, Lady Henry FitzGerald. "Lady Henry," writes Lady Lucy in 1793, "gave us an account of Lady Edward going to a ball, not in mourning, but for fancy all in black, even black stockings, with pink upon her head; you may imagine the surprise of the 'Dublin ladies'; indeed, they stared her out of countenance, for she came home to Edward, who was in bed, quite in a rage, pulled open his curtains, and told him: 'Edward, je ne veux plus aller au bal—des gens d'une telle impolitesse.'"

Pamela is drawn as a romantic and charming figure, as generous as her mother was calculating, and as impulsive as her mother was cold. She stood loyally by her husband in his revolutionary fortunes, though she does not seem to have approved of his associates' designs. She was heroic in her courage when the blow fell.

Pamela's honour and discretion have been questioned even by some of her husband's relatives; but our authors vindicate her, showing that her life was blameless, if unhappy, and that she faced her fate with spirited independence. The last thirty years of her life—she died in 1831—were spent in almost absolute seclusion in Paris. A touching incident is told of her last days, which concerns the revolutionary, Barère:

> During the whole course of her illness every day there had come to the Hotel du Danube an old man, with a handsome face and distinguished appearance; he inquired for news of Lady Edward FitzGerald. When Mme. du Crest replied to him one day, "She died yesterday," "Madam," said he, as a tear rolled down his cheek, "when you hear much evil spoken of me, say that you saw in me a heart which had sufficient feeling to mourn for an old friend, my ward. I am Barère."

The book is admirably illustrated, chiefly from miniatures. The literary style is indifferent.

THE ANT'S EXAMPLE.

"Go to the Ant" will attract all who have a taste for studies in natural history. It is popular in style, yet written out of full knowledge, and is based on first-hand observation; and it is admirably illustrated. The title is taken from the Proverbs of Solomon, and from the days of Solomon the ant has provoked the wonder and admiration of observant men. The ant exemplifies supremely the communal life, where the individual is nought and the community everything. For so lowly a creature it displays instinct that borders on intelligence and even on morality. Let one of their number be in distress and its comrades are prompt to aid. Their personal habits are cleanly, and their nests, in point of ventilation and sanitation, irreproachable. Division of labour is as complete and as smooth in working as if a first-class presiding mind were in control. There are no loafers, no strikers, no idle rich. Perhaps, we superior human beings might do well to go to the ant and learn, if not how they do it—a secret which they cannot impart—yet that they do it, and be provoked to order our own community life on better lines. What these little creatures can do so well by instinct we ought to be able to do by intelligence, and to do it better.

PSYCHOLOGY AND THE PREACHER.

Most teachers, preachers and medical men nowadays are aware how large a part the unconscious motive plays in life and behaviour. There are those who assert that it is by far the most important factor and that the conscious motive, like the visible part of a floating iceberg, is but a small fraction of the whole. Dr. Miller may not go so far, but he is of the school that sees the influence of the unconscious in nearly all human conduct. Starting from this fundamental position, he has, in previous volumes, considered what this new psychology has of guidance for the teacher and the parent. In his latest book he considers its bearing on the work of the preacher and the religious life. He treats of such themes as free-will and idealism, evolution, the places of the prophet and the priest, dogma, authority, inner conflict, the individual and the herd, prayer, sex, religious symbolism and faith-healing. It will be apparent that his book deals with subjects of the first importance, and it may be added that they are handled with sympathy and lucidity and in such a way as to be helpful to clergymen in the discharge of their duties.

MERCANTILE PRACTICE.

"Mercantile Practice," in the course of a series of brief essays, deals with such subjects as commercial practice, calculations, accountancy. The author takes such a practical detail as timber trade calculations, and works out from first principles the standards prevailing in this important business at the present day. He applies the same method in the chapter on "The Annuity," showing how the formulæ usually employed are derived, and provides and works out examples. Costs accounts and colliery accounts are dealt with exhaustively in separate chapters. Tables and formulæ are furnished in abundance in this volume, which must appeal to all students of accountancy, as well as to the working accountant.

RECENT FICTION.

The author of this work was, in his day, Chilian Minister to London, Paris, and Rome. In the novel Estero is quite sane, but his sister, Dona Manuela, keeps him under restraint, chiefly because she fears that his devotion to the cause of Liberalism will induce him to squander the family estate. He is easily led, and the demobilised soldiers—swarming in Chili since the last war—find in him a sympathetic listener. He gives them funds in the hope that they will enlist themselves on the side of the revolutionary movement. Meantime, Dona Manuela conducts a discreditable intrigue with Don Justo Quintaverde, an army officer, and a relentless persecutor of all rebels. The story is told to us by Don Guillen Cunningham. Don Estero regains his liberty through the intervention of a youth who conceives himself thwarted in a love affair by Dona Manuela. Estero, in a fury, slashes her with a sabre. She dies, and he retires to a monastery. We are given descriptions of the family feastings, or tertulias, the kite-flying competitions, and of life generally in a South American republic of about a century ago. The book is, however, unconvincing, and, one would say, severely condensed.

René Trévenin has written a quaint book, full of humour and originality, with a strain of pathos running through it. Poor, little Blanche-Marie, separated from her lover by the jealousy of Zoé Croche—Zoé had discovered that Jean Gautier, who was in love with Blanche-Marie, was in reality the Vicomte Melchior de Frétilly—takes refuge in the corner of a demolished house to hide and weep. A passing man, a vagabond and tramp, stretches out a helping hand to her in her distress. Barnabé paid no rent, but he lived comfortably; for he had adapted the interior of the museum whale to suit his very modest requirements, and it was to this home that he conducted the girl. The question of food also gave him little trouble; for he was generally able to deprive the animals in the adjoining "Zoo" of some of their surplus meat and fruit. The story tells of their life in the whale, and how Barnabé was able to secure the professorship of Neopalethanthropozoology for Professor Tipule by impersonating the professor, who could not be found at the time when the post fell vacant; of the adventures of the escaped hippopotamus, and, lastly, how, in defeating the machinations of Zoé Croche, head of the "Sewer Rats," a gang of Paris criminals, Barnabé was able to restore to Blanche-Marie her lover, the Vicomte. This is a book which both young and old will enjoy.

The Queen of Rumania has written a mystical romance. Clava, a maiden prophetess, dwells in seclusion on the mountains, and to her flock all suffering and lonely men and women. Her fame spreads all over the world, and adventurous knights make pilgrimages to her as a personification of their noblest ideals. For many years Clava remains untouched by the ordinary emotions of mankind, but eventually love comes to her and draws her down from her mystical seclusion. The author has a charming and vivid imagination, and writes in simple and picturesque language.

This is a well-told, plain tale with a strong plot and, although the author does not attempt any analytical studies, his characters are satisfactorily alive. Moira Cardonnel, left on the world with her little boy after the supposed death of her husband in a criminal lunatic asylum, finds, on the eve of her marriage with a South African millionaire, that she is not a widow. Gerald Cardonnel has escaped and is living a sane life in London, normal save for the total loss of memory that has blotted out his past. Moira, as a stranger, wins his love afresh, and, when it comes to light that he is innocent of the crime for which he has been punished, they regain a tardy happiness.

Valentine Forrester is essentially a modern product, and she follows whole-heartedly her Bohemian father's advice: "Take no notice of convention; if you let it into your life, it will paralyse you." In Vienna, however, where the girl goes on the staff of a "Commission," the ignoring of convention starts her upon a perilous path. Several nice young men are in love with Valentine, but it is to Kit Mallory that she gives her heart. Reckless, fickle and insolent in his dealings with women, Kit makes a poor hero in the critical reader's eyes, and Valentine's awakening will, doubtless, not be unexpected.

With COLD MEATS Yorkshire Relish is at its best.

Serve it always with cold beef, pressed beef, ham, etc., etc.

Has it flavour enough?

THAT is the question to ask yourself before you bring any dish to table.

Especially these Summer days should you be certain that all meat dishes are amply flavoured. Summer appetites are fickle, yet meat must be eaten—and enjoyed—if strength is to be kept up.

Summer then is a time for Yorkshire Relish—quickest and surest giver of flavour to meats—to be used more frequently than ever. On any kind of day its spicy flavour never fails to make meat supremely attractive.

For many centuries—probably ever since men first learnt to cook—certain spices have been known as the correct accompaniments to bring out the inner flavours of meats. These flavourings are still known, these spices are still obtainable. The very best of them, the absolute pick of the whole rare bunch, are used to this day in Yorkshire Relish as the basis of that rich flavour which always makes meat more than welcome.

Yorkshire Relish 9d. per bottle

Keep up your family's appetite and strength this Summer by seeing that no meal lacks its full share of flavour. A full-sized bottle of Yorkshire Relish costs only 9d., so the way is cheap as well as easy.

NEWS SUMMARY.

IRELAND.

The Dail yesterday decided to make Leinster House the temporary home of the Oireachtas and to find other accommodation for the Royal Dublin Society.—(Page 5.)

In the Senate yesterday the Finance Bill was discussed, and the Railways Bill and the Unemployment Insurance Bill were passed.—(Page 5.)

At the Central Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, Felix McMullen was found guilty of the murder of Patrick O'Halloran, of the Civic Guard, on the occasion of an attempted robbery of a bank at Baltinglass on the 28th of January last. He was sentenced to death. Peter Jordan was found not guilty of murder and was put back for trial on a further charge.—(Page 6.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, in the House of Commons yesterday, made a statement on the subject of his meeting with the French Premier in Paris.—(Page 4.)

ABROAD.

The rebellion in Brazil has not yet been crushed, and the situation is described as serious.—(Page 5.)

The Prince of Wales is to visit South Africa next year.—(Page 5.)

SPORTING.

FINANCIAL.

London Stock Markets were quiet generally. There was an outburst of strength and activity in the Rubber Share section.—(Page 9.)

Money was more plentiful in Lombard street, and rates for loans ranged from 3 down to 2¼ per cent. Discount rates remained firm. Exchanges were better, especially sterling on New York.—(Page 9.)

In Dublin the Stock Market was steady. The Bank of Ireland dividend, at 5½ per cent., tax free, shows a slight increase in the return to the Stockholder.—(Page 9.)

The Dawes Report.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Ramsay Macdonald was able to remove many of the doubts which had been created by the sudden crisis last week in Anglo-French relations. The Premier had a very difficult task. The fate of the Allied Conference, which will be held next week, hung by a thread and the whole outlook was almost as bleak as it could be when he decided to go to Paris. He stayed only one day in the French capital; yet in that short time he seems to have reached a satisfactory agreement with M. Herriot. Of course, nothing has been settled definitely. The Conference will be held on July 16th, and the two Premiers have consented to submit all their outstanding differences of opinion to the arbitration of that body. More could not have been expected; indeed, in view of all the circumstances, the surprising thing is that Mr. Macdonald accomplished so much. His statement in Parliament proves that there is still a great gulf between the French and British points of view. French opinion, while willing to accept the Dawes Report as an expedient by means of which payments may be secured from Germany, will not hear of allowing it to supersede the financial provisions of the Treaty of Versailles. It is very obvious, however, that acceptance of the Report entails some modification of the Treaty's strict letter, because the whole fabric of the Report, with all its elaborate machinery, rests on the basis of a loan of £40,000,000 for Germany. As Mr. Ramsay Macdonald remarked, investors in the proposed loan must have some guarantee that Germany's equilibrium will not be upset at some future date by measures like the invasion of the Ruhr Valley. If the Dawes Report is to be accepted without prejudice to the powers, real or supposed, of France under the Treaty, no such guarantee will be possible, and the whole movement, of which the Report is the symbol, will fall to the ground.

The main trouble lies in the problem of default. At present all questions of Germany's default are decided by the Reparations Commission, on which France commands a majority, and "sanctions" are arranged in accordance with its decisions. Mr. Macdonald very properly considers that this system must be replaced if the Dawes Report is to succeed, but the French refuse to abandon it. The British Premier, however, has proposed a compromise which ought to meet the case. It involves the appointment of an American member of the Reparations Commission, who would be entrusted with the interests of the investors in the German loan and would act in the capacity of arbitrator in all cases where unanimity should be impossible. Another point at issue is the question of inter-Allied debts. The French have been anxious to link this business with the reparations settlement, but Mr. Ramsay Macdonald refuses absolutely to complicate the German problem in any way. He is determined that the discharge of the French debt to Great Britain shall be kept strictly apart from the Allies' account with Germany, and has informed M. Herriot that the British Treasury proposes now to proceed with the matter from the stage at which it was left by the Curzon Note of last August. Finally, the French are persistent in their demand for some guarantee of their territorial security. Britain already, on several occasions, has rejected the proposal of a military pact, and Mr. Ramsay Macdonald is even more strongly opposed to it than were his predecessors in office. He is quite ready to support any plan of general disarmament under the ægis of the League of Nations, but will have nothing whatever to do with an armed alliance. When the Allied Conference meets next week these matters and many others will require to be settled before the Dawes Report can have any chance of success. The situation bristles with difficulties, but it might have been much worse, and Mr. Ramsay Macdonald deserves the greatest credit for his achievement.

Leinster House.

Yesterday, on the recommendation of the Executive Council, Dail Eireann decided to expel the Royal Dublin Society from Leinster House. We deplore this decision, but we realise that further protest would be useless. The Kilmainham Hospital, as a temporary home for the Oireachtas, would be wholly unsuitable. The report of the Joint Committee suggested, as an alternative to the occupation of Leinster House, that the Oireachtas might oust the Law Courts from Dublin Castle; but Mr. O'Higgins condemned this proposal yesterday on the ground that it would involve two removes. In any case, "possession is nine points of the law." The Bench and Bar are a very influential body, and it was quite obvious from the day when they entered Dublin Castle—which meets their needs admirably—that their tenancy would be dissolved by nothing short of an earthquake. We recognise, of course, that the Saorstat's Government must be carried on; yet it is a lamentable thing that the Royal Dublin Society should be rewarded so miserably for its secular services to the Irish people. The Free State Government is bound in honour to soften, so far as may be possible, the blow which yesterday's decision will inflict on the Society at the very centre of its far-reaching activities. In the first place, obeying the recommendation of the Joint Committee, the Government must provide a temporary home for the Society. It must not be content merely to give the Society a cheque and to turn it into the street. The new premises must be found and must be fitted for occupation before the Society is asked to leave its headquarters. In the next place, a term must be set, with no unnecessary delay, to Parliament's occupation of Leinster House.

Other things than the Government's sense of honour and gratitude will be tested by its treatment of the Royal Dublin Society. That treatment will be a test also of its attitude to what we may call the larger amenities of national life—the culture, scholarship and reverence for learning and the arts which in former centuries the world associated with the name of Ireland. Hitherto the Free State Government's record in relation to these matters has not been good. It has aroused strong criticism by its dealings with the Royal College of Science, which it has withdrawn, almost contumeliously, from the service of the people. The National Museum, too, has been profaned to the alleged necessities of politicians and departments, and we have the testimony of reputable witnesses that at this very moment its rarest treasures are in some danger of destruction by fire. It may be admitted, perhaps—though here the great Emathian conqueror would not have agreed with our Executive Council—that the higher things of life must be subordinated to the interests of national safety. Until now it has been possible to excuse the Free State Government's brusque treatment of science and the arts on the ground of military exigencies. That excuse, however, has ceased to be valid. The time has come when learning and culture ought to regain the honour which they once enjoyed throughout this land. The example ought to come from above, and it will be a very unfortunate thing if the Government of a people whose instincts, as we believe, are Attic, acquires a reputation for Bœotianism and discourages the natural attributes of every higher civilisation. We suggest, therefore, to the Government that the now alienated temples of art and science should be restored quickly to public use, and in the meanwhile should be safeguarded with the most pious care, and that its dealings with the Royal Dublin Society should embody the country's sincere respect for that splendid institution. A State whose intellectual development does not keep pace with its material progress is as pitiable as a bird with a broken wing.

Lawyers on Tour.

Among the many interesting visitors to the Free State during the next few months will be one hundred and fifty members of the American Bar Association, who have been invited to Dublin in connection with the Horse Show and the Tailteann Games. Four hundred American lawyers, with their wives and friends, are coming to England in order to attend an International Conference, which will be held in the Middle Temple on July 21st; and the first batch of them left New York on Wednesday. American law is curiously uneven. The Supreme Court of the United States is among the finest courts of justice in the world, but some of the ordinary State Courts leave much to be desired. At the first meeting of the American Bar Association's annual Convention, which began in Philadelphia, on Tuesday, Mr. Harlan P. Stone, the Attorney-General, protested vehemently against the intrusion of politics into the administration of the law in America, and urged the Bar to do everything in its power to institute sweeping reforms. He declared that, so long as the office of Public Prosecutor was a political post, there could be no hope of improvement. Politics, in the American sense, are absolutely unknown in the British and Irish Courts, and, even in the old days when judgeships were regarded as political rewards, the course of justice seldom was deflected by party bias. The old world has a great deal to learn from the United States in many ways. So far as the law is concerned, however, America still has something to learn from us.

Toy Fair.

The Toy Fair in London, at which the latest ingenuities in playthings are displayed, is of commercial and psychological importance. Before the war about eighty per cent. of the world's toys came from Germany. After 1914 England largely recovered her toy market for her own manufactures. It is regrettable that Ireland did not profit more widely by the opportunity. Neither ingenuity nor skill was lacking; for excellent toys have been made in Dublin, Belfast and Waterford. The whims of Irish labour are at fault, we fear, if Ireland has no share of the market which, as the Fair reveals, is being retained largely by British makers, despite the recovery of Central Europe. This year's Fair shows that the ugly toy is losing popularity; the unæsthetic "golly-wog" and similar monstrosities are yielding place to playthings pleasing to the eye. The growing popularity of the mechanical toy is remarkable. Children now are given, and prefer, not the finished model engine, boat or aeroplane, but the parts with which it may be built. Pains are taken to provide English children of all classes with toys suited to stimulate their ingenuity and refine their hands. In Ireland parents too often seem to follow Mr. Tony Weller's method of educating Sam: "I took a good deal o' pains with his eddication, sir; let him run in the streets when he was wery young, and shift for hisself."

Yesterday afternoon the King and Queen visited the Star and Garter Home for Disabled Soldiers and Sailors at Richmond Hill. Their Majesties received from the British Women's Hospital Executive the completed building, and transferred it to the Governors.

CIVIC SURVEY.

PROFESSOR ABERCROMBIE IN DUBLIN.

Professor Patrick Abercrombie, M.A., A.R.I.B.A., Professor of Civic Design, Liverpool University, has arrived in Dublin, and has been in consultation with the Chairman of the Dublin Civic Survey Committee in relation to the work of the survey now nearing completion.

He expressed his pleasure at the material progress made since his last visit to Dublin and commented upon the comprehensive nature of the graphical section. Professor Abercrombie has been responsible for several important surveys recently carried out in England and is an acknowledged authority on the subject.

A ROMANCE OF THE CIVIL SERVICE.

THE SALVATION OF AN INDUSTRY.

(BY HENRY P. KERNEY.)

One may find romance even in the achievements of the Civil Service, if one cares to look for it, especially when, as in the Colonies and elsewhere, administrators have somewhat freer scope for initiative than is usual at home. I know of one special case—that of the international fiscal organisation known as the Public Debt Administration, which was set up in Turkey about forty years ago with the sanction of the then reigning Sultan. Its somewhat commonplace task was to collect certain specified revenues for the repayment, with interest, of foreign loans which had previously been raised, almost entirely in England and France, but in which Germany, Austria and Italy also had a share. In the accomplishment of that task it incidentally achieved constructive work of a brilliant kind, and of incalculable value to Turkey. That was mainly the result of two factors—the confidence shown in the Administration by the Sultan's Government and the wise initiative of a succession of capable administrators, including particularly two remarkably able men, one an Englishman and the other a Frenchman. Through orderly methods and fair treatment they destroyed the legend of the incorrigible venality of the Turkish official, training and organising a staff of several thousand Turkish officials who, in point of honour, came to stand on the same elevated plane as British and French civil servants. They resuscitated Turkish financial credit from the grave of total bankruptcy, and within a generation raised it to a type of 4 per cent. nominal or 5 per cent. effective. Furthermore, at the request of the Turkish Government, they successfully undertook a large extension of their original fiscal functions, thereby facilitating economical development on a large scale, especially in the matter of railway construction.

I propose at present, however, to deal with just one specially interesting feature of their beneficent activities as exemplifying the practical good that may be accomplished by wise administration, without having any recourse whatsoever to fresh legislation. The Public Debt Administration collected, along with other Turkish revenues, the silk-tax, levying in the market-places a tithe of the value of all such produce sold. This very beautiful industry, which, like so many other products of civilisation, originated evidently in China (Serica, or the silk-country, as the ancient Romans called it), had found its way westwards to Asia Minor, and flourished there under Greek or Byzantine civilisation. The Turks had thus inherited it, and, under the Turks, it happened to decline. Forty years ago, in fact, the silk industry was dying out in Turkey, although still hanging on in a few centres like Broussa and Ismidt (in Asia Minor, about forty miles south of Constantinople), in Northern Syria and in Macedonia.

SAVED FROM DEATH.

The valuable "Baghdad" race of silk-worms was being exterminated by disease, and not only in quantity, but also in quality. Turkish silk had sunk to its lowest point. The extinction of the industry seemed inevitable within a short period. The silk cultivators seemed helpless and the Turkish Government impassive. As responsible for the silk revenue, however, the Public Debt Administration took the initiative of adopting a remedial policy, with the informal acquiescence of the Turkish Government, charging the relatively small cost of its execution to their ordinary budget of expenditure. With modern science as a basis, practical administrative methods as a means, and competition on the world-markets as a stimulus and decisive test, but without any fresh legislation, without any interference with private industrial or commercial effort, and without any penalties save those already provided by the ordinary law against fraud, they saved that dying industry, doubled, quadrupled and, finally, decupled Turkish silk exports in volume, and simultaneously raised its standard of quality to a point only inferior to that of the higher qualities of Chinese and Japanese silk.

They commenced by founding a modest technical institute in the main centre (Broussa), with a model farm, under the direction of a French expert. They then organised a system of free technical instruction and advice among the silk-cultivators of the district, teaching them to fight and, eventually, eliminate disease by means of a selective process on the Pasteur system for the rejection of eggs containing the germs of disease and by special hygienic care of the worms themselves. They also taught improved methods of cultivation of the mulberry plantations on which the worms fed. The ultimately decisive measure, however, was the creation of what was virtually a national brand, which the silk-cultivators were left perfectly free to adopt or to disregard, just as they pleased. It should be explained that the silk-cultivators, or workers, marketed not only spun silk, which was their finished product, but also the unworked cocoons and, particularly, silk-worm eggs.

BRANDED EGGS.

It was to the last-mentioned product alone that the brand applied. Every silk-cultivator who applied to the Administration, and whose stock of eggs was found, on immediate technical investigation, to be immune from disease, was freely supplied with a proportionate number of banderoles, or specially printed and gummed slips, for the sealing of the small circular cardboard boxes in which he marketed his silk-worm eggs. The slips bore, in Turkish characters, simply the name of the Administration, but the local market got to know immediately that the slip implied that the contents of every box were of A1 quality, and the foreign markets quickly followed the lead of the local market. Turkish silk-worm eggs were thus exported to the Balkan countries, to the Caucasus, to Italy, France and even more distant countries. In a relatively short time no Turkish exporter could do business unless he adopted the brand. Disease was eliminated; the pristine vigour of the famous "Baghdad" race of silk-worms was restored, and the spun silk which was the finished native product spoke for itself in the foreign markets by its special length of fibre and its general appearance. Frauds against the brand were dealt with simply as contraband, and kept down to an insignificant proportion. The annual value of Turkish silk exports rose by several millions, and the silk revenue yielded a corresponding surplus, which the Administration handed over directly to the Turkish Government, after deducting only the part attributable to the payment of foreign loans.

The foregoing case of the successful official fostering of an industry without either special legislation or the slightest compulsion or interference beyond the original scheme of tax-levying is, in many respects, an exceptional one. It may, nevertheless, serve to exemplify the fact that legislation is merely a broad sanction, whereas the essential work of government is administration, the quality of which reflects the capacity of the effective departmental head, in so far as his personal authority and scope for initiative extend.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

PREMIER'S VISIT TO PARIS.

EGYPT AND THE SUDAN.

FROM OUR PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT.
WESTMINSTER, Thursday.

In the House of Commons this afternoon, the Home Secretary, in response to Mr. Barnes, said that he had received resolutions from Labour organisations and others urging upon him the desirability of granting an amnesty to the Irish political prisoners in this country, who had been in prison for two years; but he was unable to accede to the requests. Mr. Pringle wanted to know how it was that the Home Secretary, before he became a member of the Government, was repeatedly pleading for an amnesty for political prisoners. Why had he changed his views? The Home Secretary offered no reply.

Mr. Healy also addressed a question to the Home Secretary with reference to the internees, and, not getting much satisfaction, asked if "the country did not expect the present Government to be a little more humane, especially to political offenders, than the last Ministry; and, if so, did the Home Secretary mean to confine his professions to words?" which evoked Labour and Liberal cheers.

Mr. Henderson looked uncomfortable, but, amid cries of "Answer" from his own party, he maintained a discreet silence.

* * * * *

Questioned by Sir Kingsley Wood and the Marquis of Titchfield with reference to the recent smuggling of machine-guns from this country to Russia, the Home Secretary said that he could add nothing at present to the answer previously given. The Government, he said later, had been making strict inquiries, and hoped to be in a position to proceed in a day or two.

* * * * *

The Prime Minister had an excellent audience when, at the end of questions, in response to a request from Mr. Baldwin, he rose to give an account of his recent visit to Paris. An official digest of his conversation with M. Herriot has already been published, but this fact in no way lessened the interest with which the House listened to Mr. Macdonald's own account of his interview with the French Prime Minister.

Beginning with a reference to the unfortunate situation that had arisen in Paris, and which threatened to destroy the work of the Inter-Allied Conference on the application of the experts' report, he said that he crossed the Channel to try to remove the misunderstanding. The Government had taken the view that supreme efforts should be made to put the experts' report into operation without delay, and to this end it was absolutely essential that the Inter-Allied Conference should be held, and that agreement on many points of detail should be arrived at.

French opinion was against regarding the experts' report as a substitute for the provisions of the Versailles Treaty, but was willing to accept it as a new and better way of dealing with reparations. On the other hand, the experts' report had, as its essential foundation, the raising of a forty million loan, and that could not be done unless those who had money to invest had some security that their investments would not be destroyed by political or military action, either Allied or German.

* * * * *

As the result of conversations, it was agreed to try to add to the Reparations Commission, when it was dealing with defalcations under the experts' report, an American member, who would look after the interests of investors, or, failing that, to use the services of the American who would be the Reparations Agent-General. He explained that the view of the British Government was that this gentleman should act as arbitrator in the event of a failure to get a unanimous decision from the Reparations Commission; but the French Government wished to leave that point for decision at the London conference. This was agreed to.

The French further desired to associate the question of Inter-Allied debts with the Experts' Report. To that His Majesty's Government could not agree; but they suggested a discussion of the matter between French and English officials. Then there was the question of national security, on which the French laid so much stress. The British Government made it quite clear that nothing in the nature of a military pact could be entertained, but expressed its desire to continue conversations on the subject.

* * * * *

As the questions between Great Britain and France are not to be fully debated until Monday members confined themselves to one or two supplementary questions.

The Prime Minister replied to the various points raised, but he came back to the one important thing, which was that the Dawes Report should be put into operation with "full agreement amongst ourselves and the concurrence of Germany."

The Prime Minister made another speech a little later dealing with the position of the Sudan in relation to Egypt. Earl Winterton had strongly expressed the view that unless the Egyptian Government were willing to cooperate with us in developing the Sudan we should do the work ourselves. There could be no question of handing over the control of the Sudan to Egypt.

Mr. Macdonald hoped that something might come of his interview with Zaghlul Pasha. His own position was that an agreement ought to be arrived at between the Governments of Great Britain and Egypt, that no attempt should be made to enable any outside authority—the League of Nations or otherwise—to be brought into the question, which was more in the nature of a domestic quarrel than anything else. He quite agreed that the matter could not be allowed to drift, but, pending negotiations, the status quo on both sides ought to be preserved.

From 3 o'clock until 11 the House discussed the question of claims for damage arising out of enemy raids during the war.

There were some very interesting revelations in the House of Lords this evening regarding the escapades of noble lords in their youthful days. The subject under discussion was the London Traffic Bill. The Earl of Birkenhead, referring to the scandalous and indiscriminate manner in which the roads were torn up, recalled how, as a young man, he was one of a band who, dressing themselves as navvies, went to Oxford street and dug up about 100 yards of the entrance of a great London thoroughfare.

Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, in this connection, recounted a somewhat similar escapade. As the result of a discussion with some friends, as to the ease with which anyone was permitted to tear up the roads he and some of his friends dug up a corner of Throgmorton street, in the heart of the City, and for six days nobody came near it. Then the City Surveyor's Department intervened, and started inquiries of all the authorities having power to dig up the streets. They one and all denied knowledge, but meanwhile the yawning gap remained. Twenty years afterwards he made a clean breast of the matter, but the statute of limitations fortunately came to his aid.

The bill sufficiently appealed to their lordship to induce them to give it a second reading without discussion.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION

VIEWS OF SCOTTISH EXPERTS.

At a meeting in Aberdeen yesterday of the Agricultural Education Association, Mr. D. G. Munro, College of Agriculture, Aberdeen, advocated using the film on scientific lines as an educational device. His experience as an organiser was that by cinematograph the pupils' fund of information was rapidly and pleasantly increased. The mental impressions aroused were of a vivid, lasting and accurate nature.

Mr. T. MacIver, Board of Agriculture, Edinburgh, speaking on the poultry industry, said that the annual value of poultry produce raised and consumed in Great Britain had been put at fully twenty-six and a half million pounds, so that forty per cent. was imported. The time had arrived when poultry keepers should be specialists in pedigree breeding, or in egg production.

LONDON LETTER.

THE PREMIER'S RETURN.

80 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
THURSDAY NIGHT.

It was reported in the Lobby this afternoon that there is profound satisfaction in Government circles at the success attained by the Prime Minister in his visit to Paris, and that it is now anticipated that all will go well with the arrangements for the Allied Conference. The only doubtful point concerns the representation of the United States, and on this point hopes are freely expressed that the United States will see its way to send a representative. The British Government's desire to broaden the basis of the Reparations Commission, to encourage confidence in the Dawes Report machinery and to give a feeling of security to investors in the German loan all would be strengthened by the presence of such a representative.

At Downing street to-day it was said that the Prime Minister had returned from Paris very tired, but much pleased with the result of his visit. His health had improved, and his bronchial ailment had almost disappeared. He was up early this morning preparing the statement which he intended to make to the House later in the day, and to-morrow he intends to go down to Chequers for a restful week-end. He hopes to get well and strong before the opening of the Allied Conference next week; for it is anticipated that the work will be of a very heavy character. It is probable that few people realise that the Conference will be attended by something like one hundred and thirty people, since all the delegates will come accompanied by officials, experts and attendants. The Government Hospitality Department has had great difficulty in finding accommodation for such a number of guests, but it has been done.

Electric Power.

Both Liberals and Socialists are playing a little political game with the possibilities of electricity, but Mr. Lloyd George has won the preliminary heat. It is understood that the great feature of the Liberal programme will be the proposal that electricity shall be used for power instead of raw coal. Mr. Lloyd George intends to introduce a Bill expounding this idea before the close of the present sittings, so that its terms may be known in case of a general election during the autumn. The Bill is the result of some most thorough and extensive investigations, and these are to be published in book form.

The Socialists' Thunder.

The Socialists have had much the same idea in their minds regarding the use of electricity, and the members sitting behind the Government are more than a little indignant that the Liberals have taken the wind out of their sails. They probably will have the satisfaction of being able to present their case for the use of electricity in a very different manner from that of the Liberals. There is growing dissatisfaction on the Government back benches at several weak spots in the Government's conduct of affairs. At a meeting of the Parliamentary Labour Party held this morning uneasiness was expressed concerning the unemployment trouble, and urgent representations are to be made to Mr. Macdonald to get him to introduce this electrification or some other big scheme which will provide work.

The Lewes Result

The Lewes by-election has resulted in a victory over both Liberal and Labour candidates by the Conservative, Captain Tufton Beamish. His majority was increased, while the Labour candidate lost just over three hundred votes. The result must be a shock to the Liberals; for they thought that conditions were propitious for their candidate, Mr. Howard Williams, who is at the bottom of the poll. Liberalism will have to work very hard if it hopes to achieve anything important at the next general election. The electorate of the division is nearly twenty-seven thousand, and the percentage of voters yesterday was as high as 69. Captain Beamish, the new member, is fifty years of age, and commanded the Invincible during the war, while he was Flag Commander to Admiral Sturdee during the battle of the Falklands.

Parliamentary Hours.

Members of the House of Commons, who are suffering from strain entailed by long hours and all-night sittings, are finding welcome support in their demand for better arrangements in the findings of the Joint Committee which has been considering the proposals for a remodelling of Parliamentary sittings. The Committee proposes that the House, if unable to complete its work by the end of July, shall adjourn until October or November. The report adds that "the continuation of the session into the late summer, with an exhausted House of Commons, is not conducive to good work and good temper, and the business of Parliament would in every way be more satisfactorily conducted in November and December, when members come back refreshed, than in the hot weather at the end of the summer."

The Pirrie Estate.

I understand that the late Lord Pirrie has left something like four million pounds and that the death duties will absorb nearly two million. The whole goes to Lady Pirrie in trust, with the exception of a few legacies. Lord Pirrie's fine estate at Witley Park, Surrey, is to be sold. It comprises some three thousand and fifty acres, and includes Lea Park, once the home of Whittaker Wright.

Fords.

The story that the Ford Company had acquired a huge site on the banks of the Thames was related some time ago, and to-day it was officially confirmed at a lunch given to mark the majority of the Ford Company. The site is one of over three hundred acres, situated on the north bank of the Thames at Dagenham, in Essex. This is to be covered with factories, which will provide some ten thousand people with work. It is intended to turn out something like five hundred cars a day.

The Horticultural Show.

At the Royal Horticultural Hall to-day the annual Show of the National Sweet Pea Society was opened by Queen Augusta Victoria, Consort of King Manoel. The display was a wonderful one; for this particular blossom seems to have done remarkably well this year. The Bath Cup, the principal award of the Show, went to Messrs. Sutton for a display of blooms representing almost all the colours in which these flowers are grown. Among the novelties "Wembly," a very fine flower in palest shades of soft blue, blushed with mauve, was the most admired.

The Next Lord Mayor.

The next Lord Mayor of London will probably be Sir Alfred Bower, a Fleet street man and a vintner. He is just concluding his year of office as the Swan Warden of the Guild of Vintners, a somewhat curious position, entailing the care of the swans on the reaches in the Thames. Sir Alfred Bower is also what is called a free vintner, and, as such, is exempt from certain dues in the City of London that others who follow the same vocation have to pay.

HOME OF OIREACHTAS.

DAIL DECIDES TO RETAIN LEINSTER HOUSE.

VOTE FOR AGRICULTURE.

FUTURE OF THE NATIONAL STUD.

Dail Eireann decided yesterday to retain Leinster House as the temporary home of the Oireachtas, and to supply the Royal Dublin Society with other premises.

The decision was taken with reluctance. The alternative suggested by the joint committee of both Houses—that Dublin Castle might be converted into a suitable Parliament House—was rejected by the Executive Council, on the ground that it would cost a considerable amount, and involve a hunt for accommodation for the Law Courts.

The greater part of the day was given to the discussion of votes for the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry. Replying to questions about the National Stud, Mr. Hogan said that the Government owned the land, but the ownership of the animals had not been settled. There were mares that money could not buy, and he wanted to keep them for the country.

THE DAIL.

HOME OF OIREACHTAS.

DECISION TO RETAIN LEINSTER HOUSE.

Mr. O'Higgins moved the adoption of the second report of the Joint Committee on the Temporary Housing of the Oireachtas. The Committee, he said, was of opinion that immediate effect should be given to paragraph 4.

In reply to Mr. Johnson, the Minister for Justice quoted paragraph 4 of the Committee's report, which recommended the temporary taking over of the whole of Leinster House, subject to the Government providing or paying for suitable premises in which the amenities of the Royal Dublin Society would be preserved. Continuing, he said that the Executive Council had considered the matter fully, and, having no practical alternative, they recommended to the Dail the acceptance of the Committee's recommendation.

Mr. Good asked what was the view of the Executive Council on the alternative suggestion of the Committee, the taking over of Dublin Castle for the accommodation of the Oireachtas.

The Minister replied that they had considered that alternative and rejected it, first because it would entail two removals—that of the Oireachtas and that of the Law Courts—and very considerable expense. There was the further difficulty of finding a habitation for the Courts. The inconvenience of Kilmainham as that habitation was recognised by everyone.

Mr. Good said that there was an alternative for the Courts, and that was restoring them to their original habitation. The proposal to remain in Leinster House would also entail two removals of the Society. He offered the greatest possible objection to the proposal that the Oireachtas should remain in Leinster House. In the first place, it would mean ejecting, like the cuckoo, a Society which had done, and was capable of doing in the future, much useful work for the country, and for the carrying on of which Leinster House was peculiarly adapted. To find other accommodation for them would be a matter of very considerable difficulty.

NOT SUITABLE.

He also opposed the proposal on the ground that Leinster House was not suitable for the work of the Oireachtas. They had to look forward to a period of ten years' temporary occupation, and very extensive and costly structural alterations would be necessary. He urged the Dail not to give a definite decision until other schemes had been fully considered.

Captain Redmond congratulated the Executive Council on the decision they had come to with regard to Dublin Castle, which, he pointed out, was convenient not only for the legal profession, but for litigants, traders of the city and others who had business in the Law Courts. The position resolved itself into which was the less of two evils. In his opinion it would be a far greater hardship on the country as a whole that the Oireachtas should be deprived of the most suitable available premises than for the Royal Dublin Society to be asked to accept other accommodation. The principal part of the work of the Society was at Ballsbridge.

Mr. Davin said that he could understand Deputy Good's point of view in recommending that Dublin Castle should be the permanent seat of Government. Its historic associations did not, however, commend it to him (Deputy Davin).

Mr. Good said that he did not recommend it, but pointed out that it was the only alternative proposal of the Committee.

Deputy Davin continuing, pointed out that the accommodation for deputies in the present chamber was not so limited as that for members in the British House of Commons.

Mr. Mulcahy—We hope to be more progressive here. (Laughter.)

Mr. Davin—So far as I am concerned with the report, if it means that we have given up for good the idea of ever going to Kilmainham——. (Loud laughter.)

A Deputy—Mountjoy.

Mr. Davin continuing, said that if the acceptance of the paragraph meant the abandonment of the Kilmainham idea he was satisfied to accept the recommendation of the Committee. At the same time, so as to cause the least inconvenience to the Society, a committee should at once set to work to find a permanent home for the Oireachtas, one without the associations of Dublin Castle.

GOVERNMENT'S PLEDGES.

Professor Thrift reminded the House of the pledges given by the Government when Leinster House was taken over, and the President's statement in the House that it was an urgent necessity for the Government to take every possible step to secure that those pledges to the Royal Dublin Society would be carried out in the letter and in the spirit. The Committee recommended that Leinster House should be retained for only a short time, but no one could look forward to the establishment of a permanent home for the Oireachtas for a very long time, five, ten, or fifteen years. He hoped that that would be done on a scale that would be a credit to the country, but the present financial position of the country did not hold out hopes that it could be done in the immediate future. Personally he took a very optimistic view of the future of the country, but it would take time. The word "amenities" used in the Committee's report was unfortunate. It was a very good word, but it did not describe the position of the Royal Dublin Society in the matter. The work that it had done proved to the country that the Society was an institution of real national value. (Hear, hear.) It was only those actually engaged in the work who knew how much it depended on the co-operation of the different branches of the Society. The Agricultural branch alone had been greatly helped by the support it received from the other branches. He hoped that the Dail would not except the proposition that they should sit in Leinster House until a permanent habitation for the Oireachtas had been secured.

DUBLIN CASTLE.

Mr. Gorey said that the Committee considered that Dublin Castle was more suitable than any other site, but for the fact that the law courts were estblished there, and that those could be easily removed. Deputy Redmond was more concerned for the comfort and convenience of the legal profession than he was for the providing of proper accommodation of the Oireachtas.

Captain Redmond said that he had expressly made it clear that he was not speaking for the legal profession, but for litigants, traders, and others.

Mr. Gorey—I heard what the deputy said, and I believe as much of it as I think is right. I believe that he spoke for the comfort of the legal profession.

Captain Redmond asked was it in order for a deputy to say that he would accept only as much of another deputy's statement as he considered right.

The Speaker ruled that the expression should not be used, and Deputy Gorey bowed to the ruling.

Continuing, Mr. Gorey said that, while the present accommodation for the Dail was unsatisfactory, it should be remembered that they had not a full House. If things were right in the country almost as many members more would have to be accommodated. In coming to a decision they should have regard to the circumstance that within a very short time it would be necessary to provide accommodation not for part of the Dail alone. Deputy Davin spoke about the associations of Dublin Castle with the past. It was very well for maudlin sentiment to go away to the past; but the point was what Dublin Castle stood for now and stood for when Michael Collins took it over. Dublin Castle now stood for victory, for triumph, as the fall of the Bastille stood in France. Some deputies looked only at the side of the picture that was turned to the wall. They should get away from maudlin sentiment and look at the matter as a serious proposition.

If there was any congratulation for the turning down of the Kilmainham proposal it should be given to the Committee, and not to the Executive Council, to whom Deputy Redmond had given it. He had never yet seen any sign that the Executive Council had turned it down. He would suggest that a decision on the recommendation be postponed for a few months.

A DEBATABLE POINT.

Mr. Hughes asked if they were to keep on considering the subject until the end of the present Dail. For the past six months it had been considered in all its bearings, and the Committee recognised that their proposal would mean a certain amount of inconvenience for the Royal Dublin Society. Against that they had to put the inconvenience for those who were carrying out the affairs of the country as a whole. All the other temporary arrangements that were proposed would cost fabulous sums. The Committee also took into consideration the very debatable point whether the Society was the actual owner of Leinster House. Years ago there was a discussion on the point between the Society and the British Government, and in the end the matter was allowed to drop, and it remained so since. The Government, through the Board of Works, continued, however, to maintain the premises. If the Government provided them with other suitable accommodation and some compensation for disturbance, the Society would not have very much to complain about.

Mr. Morrissey said that a decision should be come to before they separated, so that any alterations required could be carried out during the recess.

Major Bryan Cooper said that he was a life member of the Royal Dublin Society, for whose work he had a very great respect. The Committee went very thoroughly into the whole question with a deputation from the Society, and every aspect of the proposal was thoroughly explored. The Society's tenure of Leinster House fell short of absolute ownership, or so it appeared. The solution arrived at was not an ideal one, but it was the best under the circumstances, and he hoped that the Society would be compensated, not only fairly but generously. (Hear, hear.)

The adoption of the report of the Committee was carried with but a few dissentient voices.

AGRICULTURE.

DISCUSSION OF THE ESTIMATE

The discussion of the vote for the Ministry of Agriculture was resumed.

Mr. Johnson asked for further information with regard to the statistical branch of the Department. He would like a statement from the Minister whether the officer who had the compilation of statistics had any relation to the statistics section of the Deparmen of Industry and Commerce. He thought that such statistics as those presented to the Commission on Agriculture should be printed and made available to the public.

Mr. Baxter said that the appointment of one marketing inspector was not enough. The Department of Agriculture should obtain for farmers information as to marketing in other countries. It was of great importance that they should be able to send goods to other countries, while at the same time preventing the sale of foreign produce as Irish. He asked the Minister whether alongside agricultural colleges there should not also be an economic holding run directly under the Department's instructor in agriculture.

Professor Thrift said that research could not be carried on if it was intended to make it pay. Research carried on with a view to making it profitable was doomed to failure.

DIRTY MILK.

Sir James Craig, M.D., in referring to the value of research work, said with regard to the milk supply of Dublin that, so far as the supply coming into the city was concerned, one sample in twelve contained tuberculous germs. Bovine tuberculosis was different from that of human beings, but it was a most potent danger. Most of the crippled children to be seen were poisoned by tuberculosis milk of bovine origin. In addition to that, milk was capable of carrying such diseases as enteric fever and summer diarrhœa, from the effects of which between 300 and 400 children died in Dublin every year. Research showed that in winter, milk contained 600,000 such bacteria per c.c.; but in summer the number rose to four millions.

He said that they prosecuted people for putting water in milk, or for removing fat from milk, but they allowed people to sell milk which was spreading disease and killing children and adults.

Major Bryan Cooper said that the Journal of the Department was excellent, but he thought that it did not get sufficient circulation.

Mr. Davin said that one Minister ought to be responsible for the preparation and publication of statistics, and that the responsibility should not be divided up as at present between the Ministers for Finance, Industry, and Commerce, and Lands and Agriculture. He asked whether it was a fact that statistics and information that should be prepared under existing Acts of Parliament were being prepared, but were not being published. If that was a fact, was it due to the action of the Minister for Finance in refusing to give authority for the publication of these statistics?

Mr. McKenna supported the suggestion that statistics should be published to show the opposition they had to meet from Denmark and other countries, so that they could take steps to meet it.

FILLING UP FORMS.

Mr. Conlon said that forms were sent to farmers in the country to fill in, and in some cases they were unable to do it. Formerly this work was done by the R.I.C., and he thought it was a duty which might well be undertaken by the Civic Guards.

Mr. Gorey said that the small demonstration plots all over the country were no good, because few people saw them. His idea was to have one large demonstration farm of 50 to 100 acres, carried out under the supervision of the County Instructor.

Mr. Dalton said that the work of the veterinary inspectors at the ports was of the greatest importance, and there should be a larger vote for that service. The Department should have more inspectors, with more drastic powers, to put an end to the ill-treatment of cattle in the fairs and in transport.

Mr. Johnson said that he deprecated the growing tendency to throw bricks at the old Department of Agriculture, because he believed that they did not deserve the condemnation generally laid at their door. The fact was that the productivity of the land of Ireland had been increased by 25 per cent. in 25 years. There might be opinions as to whether or not that was a monument to the influences of the old Department, but the fact was that it was brought about during the lifetime of that body and coincided with their operations. It was hard to believe that it was not the plans and methods of the Department that contributed in great measure to that result.

MINISTER'S REPLY.

Mr. Hogan, Minister for Lands and Agriculture, said that the Department now responsible for statistics was the Ministry of Industry and Commerce. There was perfect co-ordination between his department and the statistical section with regard to figures relating to agriculture, and, where necessary, inspectors of his department would check figures supplied by the Civic Guard. He did not think that the establishment of commercial demonstration farms would be feasible. It was, he said, almost impossible for the State to run anything commercially. An instructor doing his work thoroughly would spread knowledge without any difficulty.

When they had their farm institutes and their secondary agricultural education, he hoped that farmers would take advantage of them. They had three or four inspectors dealing with marketing and transport. Dealing with the ill-treatment of Irish cattle in transit to England, Mr. Hogan said that a great improvement in the condition of the animals on arrival had been brought about by the Order of his department as to feeding. He had made arrangements for locating limestone, in order to carry out an experiment in the grinding of lime.

They hoped, he added, to establish two first-class agricultural faculties, one in Dublin and the other in Cork. Those were the places where research could be carried on. They hoped to give them all the required facilities, and in considering the estimates the amount required for the establishment of those faculties should be taken into account. He did not think that Deputies should approach the question from the standpoint of the amount spent.

Mr. Heffernan said that he objected to the difficulty of understanding the vote. He thought that a statement might be issued explaining the cost of the services in this Department.

Mr. Hogan said that between £13,000 and £14,000 was spent on dairying last year. This year it was proposed to spend about £31,000.

Mr. Heffernan said that that was not sufficient, considering the importance of dairying. He complained that the policy of the Department in the past was to encourage the production of beef, to the detriment of milk cattle. He drew attention to the fact that the grant for the improvement of horses had been decreased. He thought that the vote should have been increased.

DISEASES OF ANIMALS ACT.

Mr. McKenna, dealing with the administration of the Diseases of Animals Act, said that every county should have a whole-time veterinary surgeon, instead of the present

POLITICAL NOTES.

LAST YEAR'S LICENSING BILL.

CAN IT BE ENFORCED?

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

The Intoxicating Liquor Bill will be further considered by Dail Eireann in Committee next Monday.

Yesterday Mr. O'Higgins made an interesting reference—apparently casual, but, perhaps, not so casual as appeared—to the bill which was passed by the Dail last year. He said that the position of that measure was under examination. Major Bryan Cooper asked whether that meant that it was proposed to enforce last year's bill, and the Minister replied:—"I want to find out whether it is not my clear duty to enforce it."

HISTORY OF THE BILL.

The position of the Intoxicating Liquor Bill, 1923, is, indeed, interesting at the moment. On August 1st it was introduced as a bill of twelve sections. On August 3rd Mr. Higgins dropped all but the first six, which dealt with "prohibited hours" and "clubs," and the attenuated measure was passed through all its stages almost within an hour, and transmitted to the Senate. It was brought before the Senate on the day before the dissolution, and the Senate, being presented at the same time with other measures which it was required to pass urgently, adjourned consideration of the bill to the next session. It does not appear to have been mentioned in the Senate since that day, and no reference to it was contained in the Governor-General's address, which contained reference only to the intention to introduce a new measure on the subject.

TWO ARTICLES.

Article 38 of the Constitution is recalled by the few words exchanged yesterday between Major Cooper and Mr. O'Higgins in the Dail. It says:—"A bill passed by Dail Eireann and considered by Seanad Eireann shall, not later than 270 days after it shall have been first sent to Seanad Eireann, or such longer period as may be agreed upon by the two Houses, be deemed to be passed by both Houses in the form in which it was last passed by Dail Eireann."

In this connection Article 41 must also be considered. It says:—"So soon as any bill shall have been passed, or deemed to have been passed by both Houses, the Executive Council shall present the same to the representative of the Crown for the signification by him, in the King's name, of the King's assent." Note here that 270 days from the introduction in the Senate of the Intoxicating Liquor Bill, 1923, expired early in May of this year, and that the Executive Council has not yet, in spite of the first words of Article 41, presented the bill for signification of the Royal Assent.

A DELICATE MATTER.

It is, of course, doubtful whether the bill can be "deemed to be passed by both Houses," because a bill to be so deemed is defined as "a bill passed by Dail Eireann and considered by Seanad Eireann." It will be noted that the Senate did not "consider" the bill, but deferred consideration, and the Government has taken no step, through its spokesmen in the Senate, to have that consideration begun.

On this interpretation there can be no question of enforcing last year's bill, but interpretation of the Constitution is a delicate matter. There are, however, other points against making the bill an Act in that way. Even if the bill be "deemed to be passed by both Houses," the Executive Council can hardly claim, in presenting the bill for Royal assent now, that they are doing so as directed by Article 41—that is, "so soon" as it has been deemed to have been passed. It would still, perhaps, be possible for the Senate and Dail to agree on a longer period than the 270 days before it is deemed to be passed; but is it likely that there would be agreement? One comes back to the point that opponents of the measure can claim that it was not "considered" by the Senate.

THE BILL'S OBJECTS.

The bill as passed by the Dail prohibited the sale of liquor and opening of premises except between 9 a.m. and 9.30 p.m.; gave the District Justice power to order the immediate closing of licensed premises in any town or village for the rest of the day on which application might be made in certain circumstances; prohibited the sale of liquor in clubs after 10.30 p.m., and gave the police power to search clubs.

Mr. O'Higgins is taking advice on the position of the bill in view of the provisions of the Constitution, and if he wished to have it made an Act, it is hard for a layman to say that a way round the objections noted above could not be found.

ROYAL VISIT TO THE NORTH.

ARRANGEMENTS AT THE RAILWAY STATIONS.

In a statement issued last night the Executive Committee appointed by the Minister of Home Affairs for Northern Ireland to make arrangements in connection with the forthcoming visit of the Duke and Duchess of York to Northern Ireland, says:—

"The Committee has, throughout, given the most sympathetic consideration possible to the many requests from the public of the different localities who are anxious to show their loyalty to the Royal visitors, but it is deeply regretted that, owing to the limited period of the visit, it has been found impossible to accede to many of these requests.

"It is regretted that, after consultation with the railway companies and the public authorities, it has been found essential, in order to prevent the possibility of accidents to the public, that large crowds shall not be permitted on the platforms of the railway stations, and accordingly it has been necessary to limit the number of persons who can be admitted to the railway platforms at which the train conveying their Royal Highnesses will stop.

"Their Royal Highnesses, however, have been graciously pleased to agree that at the stations where the Royal train will stop they will appear at a convenient position in the railway premises, so that an opportunity may be given to as large a number as possible of the public of each locality to greet their Royal Highnesses."

THE EXPORT OF LIVESTOCK.

REGULATIONS TO BE MODIFIED.

The Department of Agriculture have been informed by the British Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries that the Ministry have made an Order, coming into force on the 14th instant, which will modify the existing regulations as regards animals from Ireland to the following extent:—

(1)—The prohibition against the issue of licences authorising the movement of imported animals to markets will cease to operate, and the normal conditions will be resumed, whereby imported animals may be moved direct to markets specially authorised by the local authority of the district, and thence to a place of detention, or to a slaughterhouse. The period of detention, whether the animals are moved direct from the landing place or passed through a market, shall, as heretofore, be one of 28 days.

(2)—Provision has also been made, whereby, in the case of fat lambs which are moved from a landing place or through a specially authorised market with a licence requiring removal to a specified slaughterhouse, the lambs may en route to the slaughterhouse, be moved to grass fields or other enclosures approved for that purpose by the local authority of the district, provided that the entire movement and slaughter shall be completed during the 6 days for which the licence will be made available.

PRECAUTIONS AT A SHOW.

Owing to an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease at Thorley, seven miles from Peterborough, all the cattle at the Peterborough Show have been fenced off from the rest of the Show ground. The police guard the gates, against which are tanks of disinfectant, with which the herdsmen, the only persons admitted, have to disinfect themselves on entering and leaving the ground. The police have rigid instructions that no cattle must be moved for seven days, subject to there being no further outbreak. Many of the cattle were destined to leave Peterborough for the Leeds Show, but this cannot now be done.

ABERDEEN HONOURS MR. YEATS.

PROFESSOR MACKENZIE STUART'S TRIBUTE.

At the Aberdeen University Graduation yesterday, Mr. W. B. Yeats, the distinguished Irish poet, received the honorary degree of LL.D.

Professor Mackenzie Stuart, in presenting Mr. Yeats for the degree, said:—In paying the highest tribute in its power to Mr. Yeats, Aberdeen University is conscious that, in adding to his titles of honour, it is adding honour to its own titles. An artist of severe integrity, whether in prose or verse, Mr. Yeats, during his long literary life, has had but a single thought—to give the best that was in him.

On our side, this ancient and most Northern University, which has numbered among its best students many Celts, and which signalised this attachment eight years ago by the creation of a Celtic lectureship, recognises in his work a special interest of its own. But it was not merely an understanding of what was specially appropriate that on this occasion moved the University. It is true that no living writer has done more than Mr. Yeats to enable the Teuton to understand the Celt. It is equally true that no living writer has done more to discover for others the most delicate and hidden places of the heart. His work has been not only racial, but human.

The finest poetry is that which ameliorates living, which teaches us how to live; and it is a fortunate moment that links with the unending life of our University the name of one whose writings will continue to give noble pleasure long after the present custodians of its interests will have passed away.

SEIZED MOTOR CAR

ABANDONED AT DRUMCONDRA

A valuable motor car, the property of Mr. Hubert J. Hanberry, of Somerstown, Laracor, Trim, County Meath, which had been seized by force, has been found abandoned at the Whitworth road, Drumcondra, Dublin.

It appears that two men, believed to be armed, called at Mr. Hanberry's residence early on Wednesday morning. They told him that they wanted his motor car—a saloon Crossley—to take a man who had met with an accident to a Dublin hospital. Mr. Hanberry declined to open the door; the visitors replied that they would take the car by force, and going to a garage at the rear of the house, they seized the car and went away in it.

The car was found yesterday evening by a Dublin detective. There was no petrol in the tank, and it is believed that for that reason the car was abandoned.

Mr. Hanberry was formerly a Justice of the Peace for the County Meath.

ACCIDENT TO SIR GUY GAUNT.

OVERTURNED CAR ON FIRE.

Rear-Admiral Sir Guy Gaunt, M.P. for the Buckrose Division of Yorkshire, had an alarming experience at Doncaster last night, which nearly cost him his life.

Sir Guy was motoring from London to his home near Bridlington in a two-seater car, when it skidded on the greasy road, two miles outside Doncaster, and overturned close to the hedge-side. He was pinned beneath it.

The engine caught fire, and the Admiral crawled from beneath the car, apparently suffering from nothing worse than a severe shaking and some bruises.

Assistance was immediately forthcoming, and the fire was extinguished with sand from the roadside. After resting a while in Doncaster, Sir Guy was driven home by the proprietor of a local garage.

The Earl of Cavan, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, speaking at Sandhurst yesterday, said that there was a great want of candidates for commissions in the Army.

The Berengaria, with Epinard aboard, arrived in New York last evening.

MYSTERY OF REVOLT IN BRAZIL.

"MOST SERIOUS."

HEAVY BOMBARDMENT OF SAO PAULO.

FOOD SHORTAGE.

BUENOS AYRES, Thursday.

Both official and unofficial news from Brazil indicate that the situation at Sao Paulo is still most serious, and that there is a great deal of unrest in other parts of the country.

Official statements received to-day disclose for the first time the fact that the operations against the rebels are being directed by the Federal authorities from headquarters outside the city, and there appears but little doubt that the resistance of the rebels, supposed to have been overcome last Tuesday, not only still exists, but has now assumed formidable proportions.

A heavy bombardment still continues, and a veritable war seems in progress. Hitherto it has been impossible to obtain either confirmation or denial from Rio de Janeiro of the report that the State of Parana and part of the Rio Grande have joined the revolutionaries.

Official statements, however, emphasise that all the State Governors have telegraphed to the President, offering to send local troops to support the Government.

Despite the encouraging Government communiqués, private advices received here declare that persons arriving at Santos from Sao Paulo report that Sao Paulo is still in complete control of the rebels.

The streets of the city are described as being strewn with dead and wounded, while food is short.

Anxiety is also expressed at Santos at the spirit of the crews of three warships, including the Dreadnought Minas Geraes, which is stationed there.

It is reported that a group of officers and men yesterday summoned aboard the Minas Geraes refused to obey orders, whereupon they were summarily arrested, and forcibly taken aboard the vessel, which immediately sailed up the coast.

Another message alleges that a battalion of Federal troops from Santos has joined the rebels.—(Reuter.)

MR. DE VALERA.

RUMOUR OF IMPENDING RELEASE.

It was rumoured in Dublin yesterday that it is the intention of the Free State Government to release from prison next week Mr. de Valera and other political prisoners.

SOUTH AFRICAN VISIT.

PRINCE OF WALES ACCEPTS FOR NEXT YEAR.

CAPE TOWN, Thursday.

The Prince of Wales has accepted the South African Government's invitation for a visit to South Africa. The Prince will not be able to come this year, but will come next year, at a date to be arranged later.—(Reuter.)

MR. JUSTICE FEETHAM.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

ARMAGH, Thursday.

Mr. Justice Feetham, Chairman of the Boundary Commission, accompanied by his staff, arrived in Armagh last night from Clones, and put up at the judges' residence on the Mall.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

NEWRY, Thursday.

Mr. Justice Feetham arrived at Newry today about noon. His Honour proceeded on by Narrow-water and Warrenpoint, and in the evening returned to Newry, where he had tea in the Shelbourne Restaurant. Later he left to inspect the Armagh and Louth border.

The visit was strictly private, and persons prominent in political circles were unaware of His Honour's presence in the town until late in the afternoon. It is understood no interviews took place.

NORTHERN COALFIELD.

OPENING OF TYRONE MINE.

The formal opening of the Coalisland (Co. Tyrone) collieries will take place on Friday, 25th July.

Sir Samuel Kelly, the owner of the collieries, has arranged for two special trains to convey guests from Belfast, Lisburn, Lurgan, Portadown and Dungannon to the colliery sidings to witness the interesting ceremony of opening the great undertaking by Sir James Craig, Bart., the Prime Minister. These trains are timed to arrive at 2.35 and 2.50. The colliery will be working until five o'clock, after which hour a number of guests will be allowed below ground.

Guides will be in attendance to direct visitors who wish to see the Ulster Fireclay Works to the new town, to which the name of Newtownkelly is being given, and in which the miners reside.

THE QUEST.

TO RESCUE CREWS OF ICE-BOUND SHIPS.

IRISH TIMES FOREIGN SERVICE.
FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

COPENHAGEN, Thursday.

The vessel which brought the news back from Greenland of the rescue of the crew of the Danish expedition ship Teddy, who had been imprisoned in the ice off Greenland since last summer, was Shackleton's old ship, The Quest.

The ship has now had a broken propeller repaired at a port in Iceland, and left on Tuesday to try and find the Norwegian expedition ship Annie, of which nothing has been heard of for twelve months.

The Annie, like the Teddy, is supposed to have been fast in the ice, and fears are entertained that her crew may have perished during the Arctic winter.

The Quest will bring back the twenty-four members of the crew of the Teddy, as well as the crew of the Annie, if the latter are found alive.

THE SERMON OF THE MOUNT IN BUSINESS.

LORD LEVERHULME'S VIEW.

Lecturing at Liverpool yesterday, Lord Leverhulme declared that religion had not kept pace with science in improving the lot of mankind, and still less had modern industrialism kept pace with religion. Both the manufacturer and the trade union had ignored the hard ethical laws of the Sermon on the Mount, and would as inevitably come to grief as if they had ignored the law of gravity.

Ethical discovery and development must go side by side with scientific investigation for human peace and happiness.

SHIPPING GUARANTEES.

Mr. Graham, replying to Mr. A. M. Samuels in the House of Commons yesterday, said that the amounts guaranteed under the Trades' Facilities Act for shipbuilding since November, 1923, were:—England, £262,500; Scotland, £4,118,000, and for the purchase of plant and material for the construction of vessels at Belfast, £1,450,000, making a total of £5,830,500. These guarantees were for ships other than tramp steamers or special steamers, and they were, in addition to £7,089,000 guaranteed before November, 1923. Since the Government came into office approximately six million pounds had been guaranteed to shipping.

WATERFORD CO. COUNCIL.

REPORT ON RECENT INQUIRY.

The Ministry of Local Government has published the report of an inquiry held into the performance of their duties by the County Council of Waterford by Mr. P. D. Conkling, Inspector for the Ministry, in February and March last.

In forwarding the report for the careful consideration of the County Council, the Minister expresses the view that the County Council would be well advised to appoint immediately a small select Committee of Investigation, who would be authorised to inquire into the county administration generally, including an examination of the methods of their subsidiary committees, with the object of establishing an efficient county administrative machine, which would prove of effective service to the County Council and their successors in office.

Among the principal witnesses examined at the inquiry were Senator Kenny, Chairman County Council; Mr. Goulding, Vice-Chairman; Senator Sir J. Keane, N. Wall, T.D.; County Secretary, County Surveyor, Secretary C.B.H.; Clerk to the Mental Hospital Committee, and Mr. Jephson, Assistant Surveyor.

INSPECTOR'S FINDINGS.

The Inspector finds that the Waterford County Council, which assumed office in June, 1920, consisted of 29 members. An examination of the attendance roll showed that of the 29 members (a) seven, four of whom are in the Dungarvan area, attended the meetings fairly regularly; (b) six attended indifferently; (c) from June, 1922, especially, sixteen have exceptionally poor records.

The Inspector's report proceeds:—"Eight members for County Council and three for Finance meetings form a quorum. It is, therefore, not surprising to find from the evidence submitted that it was very frequently a matter of great difficulty to assemble the necessary quorums to allow of any business being transacted. Meetings did not begin for an hour or more after the scheduled time, and even then many members did not remain throughout the proceedings. As a result there was not an opportunity very often of dealing with the entire agenda, and business was postponed from meeting to meeting. This failure to get through with the work was further brought about, I regret to report, by the introduction on the part of some members of discussions of (a) a purely political character, (b) irrelevant matters, which served no other purpose than that of obstructing and delaying the proper conduct of the legitimate business of the Council. This condition of affairs must seriously tell against good administration, and could not obtain in the life of any competent and responsible body keen on discharging its duties to the community which elected it. Another disquieting feature was that, while notice of the consideration of matters of vital importance to the interests of the ratepayers at large would fail to secure a reasonable attendance, the mere appointment of an official would bring in a comparatively big number of members.

"It was pointed out that the life of the present Council synchronised with an unprecedented period of disturbance and trouble in the country, and travelling to meetings was not easy, and that all the members were not at liberty to attend. But, as against this, we find the attendance average poorest for the past twelve months, and the contention that the record of the previous Council was little, if any, better than now.

"I am of opinion that were it not for the highly creditable manner in which the chairman, vice-chairman, and a few others attended and determined to carry on the work the administration would have completely collapsed over a year ago. The majority of the Council made little effort to fulfil their obligations or faithfully discharge their duties of office as elected representatives of the people. While no serious charge of mal-administration can be sustained, the Council, on the whole, did not exercise that control, or display that efficiency, punctuality, close attention and keen sense of interest in affairs which alone makes for sound and successful administration."

COUNTY DEPARTMENTS.

The report goes in detail into the working of the various county departments. The Inspector says that in view of the duties and responsibilities of the County Secretary the question of fixing a more adequate rate of remuneration should be considered by the Council. While the Clerk to the Mental Hospital Committee enjoys a remuneration of £510 per annum the County Secretary receives £468 5s.

The Inspector expresses dissatisfaction with the manner in which this department is organised and controlled, and thinks that the Secretary should be given greater authority. In connection with roads the Inspector says: "In considering the estimate and demand for 1924-25 in respect of this service, however, I would recommend to the Council and County Surveyor to take into account (a) the actual expenditure for each of the last five years; (b) the reduction of 20 per cent. in wages; (c) and the Road Board grant to the county of over £20,000, and to satisfy themselves whether or not these considerations should effect a reduction in the amount of the estimate already proposed, without seriously hampering or restricting the work of maintaining a satisfactory system of roads in the county for the coming year."

TWO SUGGESTIONS.

The Inspector says that it was becoming quite a practice for many members of County and District Councils to engage in work for profit under the said Councils, and alleges that there is far too much leniency extended by the County Council to certain rate collectors who are in arrears.

The report concludes:—"Finally, I have to mention two suggestions put forward by Mr. Wall, T.D., in the course of his evidence, and I am of opinion that they deserve the very fullest consideration:—(a) The appointing of a small select Committee of the County Council to go into the estimates and demands yearly and the general expenditure periodically; (b) the appointment of a paid Commissioner to the County for a period of one year, in order that a really good standard of control and conduct of affairs should be set up for the better education and guidance of the elected bodies in the future."

A GREAT JAMBOREE.

7,000 BOY SCOUTS GOING TO DENMARK.

IRISH TIMES FOREIGN SERVICE.
FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

COPENHAGEN, Thursday.

Preparations for the great Boy Scout Jamboree, to be held in Copenhagen on August 10th to the 23rd, are well advanced. General Baden Powell is President of the Jamboree. It is expected that 7,000 Boy Scouts from all parts of the world will compete in the Scouts' Olympic Games.

The Irish Free State is to be represented.

DONEGAL ASYLUM STRIKE.

POSITION OF OLD AND NEW STAFFS.

Mr. P. J. McGoldrick, T.D., has given notice that at the next meeting of the Donegal Asylum Committee, when the whole position in regard to the strike of attendants which took place on the 1st of April, he will move the following resolution:—

"That the proviso contained in the Committee's resolution of the 12th May, 1924, as conveyed to ex-members of the staff, regarding individual applications being made and considered by the Committee, if not availed of within 28 days from the 14th July, 1924, shall lapse; consequently, individual applications not received by the Resident Medical Superintendent, on behalf of the Committee, on or before the 11th August, 1924, shall not be considered."

The Rev. James Burns will also propose—"That, in view of the fact that the present staff had been chosen hurriedly and in exceptional circumstances, the Resident Medical Superintendent be asked for his opinion on the suitability of those serving on the six months' probation, and that if, after hearing the opinion of the R.M.S., the Committee decide that certain members of the present staff have not shown signs of suitability, the Committee of Management do at said meeting consider such cases, and, in the event of some, or any, of the present staff, male or female, having proved to be unsuitable, the Committee of Management, in the interests of the institution, do proceed to complete the staff from the large number of applications forwarded since 1st April."

CLOSER TIES WITH ENGLAND.

M. POINCARE'S HOPE.

TRIBUTE TO COURAGE OF FRENCH PREMIER.

IRISH TIMES FOREIGN SERVICE.
FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Thursday.

In the Senate this afternoon, when M. Poincaré rose to interpellate the Government on its foreign policy, he was interrupted from the left benches by cries of "Down with war," and "Up with peace.' The right rejoined, "We all say that."

M. Poincaré took up both cries, saying they were motives which might easily have the unanimous support of the assembly. What it was necessary to know, however, was the means by which one could be averted, and the other assured.

He went on to pay tribute to the courage and patriotism of M. Herriot, declaring that he would not attempt to put difficulties in his way, and that all he wished was to place certain facts in a clear light.

He did not think any policy possible, other than that which he himself followed for the last two years.

If M. Herriot had gone to Chequers before the occupation of the Ruhr he would not have been able to obtain the results, which he now led them to hope for.

Collaboration with England must be made closer. He was grateful to M. Herriot for his efforts to make it so. The ex-Premier said it was to be feared that the Berlin Government was making efforts in London to get the Expert's plans whittled down.

TO-DAY'S LONDON PAPERS.

MR. MACDONALD'S VISIT.

The Times in a leading article on the Prime Minister's statement in Parliament on the results of his visit to Paris observes:—Mr. Macdonald has had an experience that has proved much more than a "storm in a teacup." He has saved the Conference—at what a cost only the Conference itself will show. He has prevented open disagreement between Great Britain and France on the eve of the Conference, and he has made it possible to go on with work preparatory to the application of the Dawes Report, though, as he himself implies, under conditions much less favourable than they recently seemed to be. What is the most essential now is to cling firmly to the opportunities that still remain.

There is a new and much more difficult situation, a looser and less confident agreement, and a stubborn effort must be made to build securely on that. The really pertinent question is, whether the Paris agreement will make it possible to put the Dawes Report into effective operation at an early date, or whether, now that what seemed like a definite plan is abandoned and the probable sequence of events is obscured, the simple act of starting the Experts' machinery working may not be too long delayed. The Conference will meet, and that at any rate is a gain. It is necessary to take fully into account the changed situation and the strength of the French opposition.

The difficulties are now fully revealed. The Conference will certainly not have an easy task. There is, however, no reason yet to assume that it will fail, and since all British Parties are united in desiring the speedy application of the whole Dawes Report, it seems right to hope that British comment, at any rate, will be of a nature to further the one simple purpose of the Conference.

UNITED STATES PRESIDENCY.

MR. DAVIS'S CHANCES.

The Washington Correspondent of The Times, in a message from New York yesterday, says:—Mr. John Davis, the Democratic nominee for the Presidency, will have with him as Vice-Presidential candidate Governor Charles Bryan, of Nebraska, brother of Mr. William Jennings Bryan. The Democratic Party has lifted up its heart since Mr. Davis seized the standard it offered. It wonders a little that, after so much turmoil and bitterness and indecision, its choice should have been so good, and it is looking anxiously to its chosen man for signs of his power to perform miracles. It knows that in sheer ability, in persuasiveness and in popular appeal, Mr. Davis stands above President Coolidge. It points with pride to his record of flawless integrity, and it is firmly convinced that public resentment against the Republican Party is greater than is generally believed. Out of these things, perhaps victory can be made, or so it hopes. It needed a leader; it has found one, and with him it believes it may float comfortably to a plane above the narrowness and meanness of the past fortnight.

This is the mood of the moment, and it will last only as long as Mr. Davis proves to be a quickening and an inspiration.

NEW YORK TRAFFIC.

REGULATED BY LIGHTS.

The Times New York Correspondent states that there was another innovation in New York yesterday for dealing with the traffic congestion, which is becoming an increasingly serious problem. The method consists of a system of coloured lights extending over Broadway from Rector street, in the financial district, for six miles to 86th Street at intervals of six blocks. Directed by these signals north and south bound traffic moves uninterruptedly for ninety seconds; then, after an interval of ten seconds, east and west traffic proceeds for forty seconds.

The system is supplemented by policemen, but last night it worked so efficiently that they had little to do.

MUNSTER AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY'S SHOW.

JUMPING AND TROTTING COMPETITIONS.

The three-day show held by the Munster Agricultural Society was brought to a close yesterday. Although the programme was not a heavy one, there was plenty to provide interest.

The following are the results of the jumping competitions:—

Champion gate jump, over hanging gate—Mr. M. Hyde's Vixen (Master T. Hyde), 1; Mr. E. Stack's Damaged Goods (Mr. D. L. Hennessy), 2; Mr. R. Perrott's Peter (Mr. J. Ryng), 3.

Jumping competition for ponies not exceeding 14.2 hands—Mr. E. O'Grady's The Topper (Master W. O'Grady), 1; Mr. R. Power's Patsy (owner), 2; Mr. T. R. Carroll's Bit of Mint (Master T. Hyde), 3.

Speed trotting competition for cobs and ponies not exceeding 14.3 hands high. One mile—Mr. A. Smith's Bubbles (owner), 1; Mr. D. Kidney's Evening Star (Mr. M. Desmond), 2; Mr. C. E. FitzGerald's Dolly (owner), 3.

In the driving competition, Mr. Forrest's Killeens was doing very well, and at about half the journey seemed to have the best time, but the pony's bridle came off and he galloped a couple of rounds of the course out of control, and made for the entrance gate, where he collided with one of the turnstiles, and, getting free from the gig, galloped about a while further. No person was injured.

There were no public sales at the show.

Mr. D. S. MacColl is retiring from the Keepership of the Wallace Collection in London on September 30th. He is to be succeeded by Mr. Samuel James Camp, F.S.A., at present Assistant to the Keeper and Inspector of Armouries.

FINANCE BILL.

HOUSE OWNERS' GRIEVANCE.

RECOMMENDATION BY SENATE.

RAILWAYS BILL PASSED.

The Senate yesterday discussed the Finance Bill, and passed the Railways Bill and the Unemployment Insurance Bill. Several other measures were advanced a stage without discussion.

Sir John Keane said that the House should recommend the Government to delete the clause in the Finance Bill which withdraws certain allowances that house-owners receive in respect of repairs. The recommendation was passed, but President Cosgrave did not accept it.

A recommendation to postpone the operation of the sixpenny tax on imported parcels until September 1st was accepted by the President.

When the Railways Bill was passed the Chairman and several other members referred to the ability and tact which the Minister for Industry and Commerce had shown while piloting the Bill through its various stages.

THE SENATE

FINANCE BILL.

REVENUE COMMISSIONERS' REPORTS.

The Finance Bill was discussed in Committee.

Sir John Keane said that on the second reading he had asked when they might expect the annual report of the Revenue Commissioners for the year 1922-1923. That report ought to give very valuable information to those who took an interest in finance, and without it they would be unable to give intelligent criticism to the Government proposals. On the question of income tax they ought to know the amount assessed, whether it was increasing or decreasing, and also the amount of arrears. Could the President give them any idea when that report would be issued?

President Cosgrave said that he did not think any report would be issued for that period, as the Commissioners were not appointed until February or March, 1923. It would be within the recollection of the House that a definite line was not drawn in regard to Customs until April 1st, 1923. He did not think it would be possible, having regard to what he would call "the Commissioners' creation in 1923," to submit a report concerning income tax. He would undertake to speak to the Minister of Finance to see if he had any reports on the subject. Ordinarily they ought to start from the 1st April, 1923.

REPAIRS TO HOUSES.

Sir John Keane moved a recommendation that Section 2, Clause 1, which deals with allowances for repairs to houses, be deleted. He said that he understood the recommendation dealing with allowances for ratepayers was a benefit won for the Irish taxpayer by the strategy of the Nationalist Party in the British House of Commons. Relief was given in two forms—first of all, in the form of a deduction, and then in the form of a rebate. If a person owned a house the Poor Law valuation of which was £120, and let it at £120, he was assessed on the £120, less one-sixth. That would be on the sum of £100. The same applied if he occupied the house. Under the Government's proposal contained in Section 2, Clause 1, it was intended to differentiate between the two sets of circumstances. The deduction would be continued if the house was let at the amount of the Poor Law valuation, but if it was occupied by the owner the deduction would be withdrawn. That was, he submitted, inequitable. The Government argument, no doubt, would be that the rent in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred was in excess of the Poor Law valuation, and ordinarily that the house was let at a rent in excess of the valuation, and that no deduction should be permissible. He challenged the basis of that contention, which was not equitable.

Country houses were not valued above the letting figure—in fact, at present they were rather a drug on the market. He reminded the House of the values placed by the Courts on houses for which compensation was sought, and said that he had seen a value of £2,200 placed on a house which had cost £24,000 to erect.

The Government proposed to deal with all property alike, on the ground that it would be fair enough, because the majority of the houses were let above their value. The British Government went even further than the deduction he had mentioned, for not only did they allow a deduction of one-sixth from the value, but if the owner of the house showed by accounts of a five years' average that he had spent more than one-sixth, they allowed the full value of the amount of expenditure, even up to the total amount of the valuation, if he could prove that that sum had been spent on the property. All that was taken away by the Government's proposal.

INEQUITABLE.

It was not unusual for an owner to spend an average of 25 per cent. on repairs, and it was frequently far greater than that figure. In a large English estate as much as 40 per cent. was spent in repairs, and it was for that reason that the rebatement was given. It was, therefore, most inequitable that by an apparently simple amendment that benefit should be withdrawn.

There was one other matter he desired to call attention to. The word "whole" was inserted before the cost of repairs. Hitherto relief was given where the owner undertook to bear the cost of repairs; now the absolute term "whole cost" was used, the result of which would be that the landlord's deduction would be withdrawn because of the agreements that had been made by which the landlord undertook to do the outside repairs, and the tenant the interior repairs. The landlord generally did 75 or 80 per cent. of the repairs, and the provision seemed very harsh for people who had made such agreements, having regard to these deductions and the rent fixed.

The reason he asked the House to agree to his recommendation, and delete the clause was that the Government's proposal was a rough and ready and inequitable method of dealing with the problem. The right method was provided by a revaluation. Furthermore, owners were already taxed to the limit of endurance. There was very little revenue to come out of the proposal.

Mr. MacLysaght urged the House to accept

INISHOWEN POTEEN RAID.

REMARKABLE SCENES.

The story of the scenes which followed upon a raid by the Civic Guard for poteen in Inishowen, was told at the Molan District Court, when Daniel McDermott, Glengad Mountain, was summoned for harbouring illicit spirits. McDermott and his wife were also charged with obstructing Sergeant Murphy and Guard Hoban.

The evidence of Sergeant Murphy and Guard Hoban was that on the 27th June, while Guard Hoban was searching one of McDermott's out-houses the sergeant, who was in the house, was confronted by Mrs. McDermott, who lifted off the dresser a five-naggin bottle of poteen and smashed it on the floor. Sergeant Murphy called Guard Hoban, who with a handkerchief soaked up more than a glass of the spirit, wringing the handkerchief into a bowl. Guard Hoban went off with the bowl. Meantime Mrs. McDermott having called her husband from the fields, tried to strike the guards with a pounder, and when this was taken from her she tried to knock the bowl out of the hands of Guard Hoban, and to strike both him and the sergeant with wet clothes taken out of the wash-tub. Guard Hoban carried away the bowl, and the male defendant then arrived and made for the sergeant with a graip. The sergeant rushed into the house, seized another graip and defended himself against McDermott's attack from the outside. Meanwhile Mrs. McDermott threw stones at the sergeant, which missed him, but smashed the delph on the dresser.

Superintendent Galligan said that the neighbours stated that when the female defendant got drunk she beat her husband, and when he got drunk he beat his wife. Both defendants were young, the woman being only about twenty-two years of age. The children were not being reared; they were simply allowed to grow up. He understood that two stills were worked in the place after this occurrence, and he took it that the object was to raise the amounts of the anticipated fines.

District Justice O'Hanrahan said that it was humiliating to an Irishman to sit and listen to such a case. He was beginning to feel ashamed of the country which could produce such people. Under the Public Safety Act, 1924, he sentenced Daniel McDermott to six months' imprisonment with hard labour, for harbouring the illicit spirit. For obstructing the guards he fined him £10, with the alternative of three additional months' imprisonment without hard labour. Were it not for her children Mrs. McDermott would also be sent to jail. However, he would impose a sentence of six months' hard labour, the warrant not to issue unless within two years she was convicted of any offence.

NORTHERN TECHNICAL TEACHERS.

NEW SALARY SCALE.

The Northern Ministry of Finance has approved of regulations dealing with the salaries of teachers in Northern Technical schools and classes.

The salary scales, which cannot be carried into effect until actually approved by Parliament, are to be fixed for a period of two years from 1st August, 1923, after which they are to be subject to review. They are as follows:—

Full-time teachers.—Teachers of women's trades, of physical exercises (women), and of not less than four domestic economy subjects—£170, rising by annual increments of £10 to £300.

Elementary commercial teachers (men).—£200, rising by annual £10 increments to £300; women—£200, rising similarly to £250.

Domestic economy teachers of more than four subjects, manual instructors, and teachers of physical exercises (men)—£210, rising to £350.

Teachers of mathematics, pure science, higher commercial work, arts and crafts, and technological subjects (men)—£250, rising by annual increments of £10 to £300 and £15 to £400; women—£250, rising in like fashion to £300 and £350.

Teachers of applied science, principals of urban schemes in areas of not less than 5,000 population, head of domestic economy in Municipal College of Technology, Belfast—£300, rising to £475.

Principals of county or regional schemes in areas with population less than 100,000—£425, rising to £600. This also applies to principals of urban schemes where the administrative area's population is from 5,000 to 10,000.

The same principals where the population of the administrative area is respectively over 100,000 and 10,000 receive £475, rising to £650.

Principal of Londonderry Municipal Technical School, and the heads of the mathematics, physics, and electrical engineering, building and furnishing trades, textile industries, chemistry, commerce, art, and junior trades preparatory school, in Belfast College of Technology—£600, rising to £750.

Head of mechanical engineering department, College of Technology, Belfast—£650, rising to £850; and the principal of the same college—acting under the Belfast Director of Education—£850, rising to £1,000.

There is a maxima of £50 higher in each of the above cases, with the exception of the first two and the last mentioned, for teachers with a degree or an approved equivalent, and there are other allowances for teachers, who, although rated as assistants, normally act as principals, etc.

It is pointed out that the payment of the cost of living bonus and temporary additional remuneration will be discontinued as from 1st August, 1923.

Part-time teachers will be paid 5s. 6d. per hour for men, and 5s. for women, out of the funds at the disposal of education authorities and managers of technical schools.

In placing on the new scales teachers graded in the first five classes, one increment shall be granted for each two years of past service as is recognised by the Ministry for that purpose, and the teacher shall enter the group scale either at the resultant salary, or at his existing salary, whichever is the greater.

system of appointing several at small part-time salaries.

Mr. Cooan asked for further particulars about the commitments of the Government in connection with the National Stud, because it was of the utmost importance that the Stud should be maintained.

Mr. Gorey, urging the use of the tuberculin test, said that the extent to which tuberculosis existed in Irish dairy cattle was not appreciated. As for horse-breeding, he, as one engaged in it, was very doubtful whether there was money in it, except for the few, the dealers and some others. With regard to dairy cattle, he pointed out that while the type introduced some years ago, the shorthorn and some others, had improved the stock in some counties in the West, it had actually injured the dairy herds of Tipperary, Limerick, and parts of Kilkenny. The type of shorthorn that they had been breeding exclusively had almost completely destroyed the fine dairy cattle of those counties. He would go so far as to say that, where milk production was aimed at, no type should be used except the dairy shorthorn. It was in the development of that type that they would be able to meet the competition of other countries.

Mr. White said that some County Committees of Agriculture, when appointing instructors, had turned down young men who had the College of Science degree, and appointed inferior men. He urged that the Department ought to look into the matter.

COW-TESTING.

The Minister of Agriculture said that the number of cows under test was lamentably small. In fact, they found it difficult to get farmers to organise for this purpose. The testing associations would effect the object they all desired, the elimination of bad cows. There were eleven instructors paid by the Department, and supervisors paid by the Association at the rate of 7s. for each cow tested—4s. from the Department and 3s. from the Association. One of the instructors received £459 per annum, with expenses; three, £330; five, £280; one, £238, and one, £210—all with expenses.

As to the improvement of horse breeding, they were providing £1,600, against £2,000 last year. The experience of their inspectors led them to the conclusion that more money would not be taken up in nominations for mares.

The position about the National Stud was simple. There was no question as to who owned the land. "We own the land," he added emphatically. "There is a question as to who owns all the horses. That is probably the most valuable stud in the world. There are mares in that stud that money could hardly buy."

They were not so much interested as to who was to be the final owner of the land, but as to what was to happen the mares. What they were really concentrating on was to keep the mares in this country.

He agreed with Mr. McKenna's suggestion as to the appointment of one full-time veterinary officer for every county, instead of three or four part-time officers. They had asked the County Councils to appoint such officers, and would not sanction others.

Outside the owners of pedigree herds, the number of farmers who availed themselves of the tubercular test was small.

With regard to payment for cattle slaughtered at ports, the total loss to farmers was between £3,000 and £4,000. That was extremely hard on individuals, but the Government could not afford to do anything in the way of making payments which might be regarded as precedents by authorities in other countries. They could not take risks in regard to cases that should be paid for by the British Government. He hoped that, for the credit of the cattle trade, the farmers concerned were not still out of pocket.

The vote was agreed to.

FORESTRY.

The Minister for Agriculture and Lands moved a vote of £15,225 for the purposes of forestry.

The Minister informed the House that this year they were adopting another system to substitute that of giving small loans for re-afforestation to people applying for them. They were asking the County Committees of Agriculture to set aside a certain sum for forestry, to acquire land for nurseries, and to sell the plants at cost price to farmers. The Department would make them a grant of £20 an acre for every acre so used, and would supply a forester to look after the nurseries.

Forestry development was essential to the country, which is, perhaps, the worst wooded in the world, but that development would require a considerable sum of money, which would provide but little employment. Furthermore, no return could be expected for the expenditure for about thirty years. The position of the Ministry was that it was a time when the most drastic economies had to be made in every department of the State, and they could not undertake expenditure on a large scale, to fructify only after a number of years. As soon, however, as they could afford it, money should be spent liberally in making a commencement. The way proposed for the commencement now was to acquire all the land they could get for forestry purposes. Already they had some 20,000 acres, including 6,000 acres handed over without cost by the Ministry for Defence.

Major Bryan Cooper said that the vote was not a large one, but in many respects it was an important one. There was in the country a large amount of ignorance of the value of woodlands, an inherent hatred of trees. The first thing a farmer generally did on getting his land vested was to start to cut down the timber. He wished the Department would do more than it was doing to dissipate that ignorance.

The vote was passed.

WHITLEY COUNCILS.

President Cosgrave, for the Minister of Finance, moved a vote of £32,925 in connection with the larger vote for the Ministry for Finance.

Major Bryan Cooper drew attention to the failure of the Minister for Finance to form something in the nature of a Whitley Council. The Civil Servants of the Soarstat should not be deprived of any rights enjoyed by Civil Servants in Great Britain.

Mr. Wilson asked why should Deputy Cooper compare the civil servants of the Saorstat with those of Great Britain.

Major Bryan Cooper said that these civil servants had elected to stand by the ship and stay in the country, and, therefore, they should not be placed in an inferior position to those who left and went to England or Northern Ireland. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Johnson said that in practice the establishment of a Whitley Council had helped to remove many difficulties and grievances, and had given an opportunity for the civil servants to approach the Minister of Finance or whoever was responsible for their particular departments. He could not understand why the Minister was so obdurate in refusing to set up such a Council, because by their action they were preparing future trouble.

The House adjourned at 10.30 to 12 o'clock to-day.

QUESTIONS.

NO FISH CURING STATION.

Mr. K. O'Higgins, for the Minister for Finance, in reply to Major Cooper, said that the Commissioners of Public Works did not consider practicable the establishment of a fish-curing station on the West Pier at Dun Laoghaire. There was no part of the pier at which fishing boats could be discharged, both because there was not sufficient shelter and there was no proper wharf wall, but only a sloping wall, based on a rubble breakwater.

BOY SCOUTS.

Mr. Duggan, for the Minister for Defence, replying to Mr. S. Milroy, said that the Department of Defence understood that the Boy Scouts' organisation was not in any sense military in character. It was, therefore, not concerned with the organisation and took no official cognisance of the doings of any of its members.

Mr. Milroy asked if the Minister was aware that these Scouts were described as "the eyes of the Army"; and whether he would say what Army was referred to. What was an Imperial Jamboree? (Laughter.)

Mr. Duggan—I cannot reply to that question.

Twelve well-known Communist leaders and sympathisers at the City of Govan Police Court yesterday were fined for obstruction.

Miss Zetta Hills, who started to swim the English Channel yesterday, gave up the attempt after she had covered seven miles.

BALTINGLASS MURDER.

DEATH SENTENCE ON McMULLEN.

THE JUDGE AND COUNSEL.

In the Central Criminal Court, Green street, Dublin, yesterday, before Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy and a jury, Peter Jordan and Felix McMullen, who were charged with the wilful murder of Patrick O'Halloran, member of the Civic Guard, at Baltinglass, on the 28th January last, following a raid on the National Bank, were re-tried.

At the previous trial, which occupied two days, the jury failed to agree to a verdict.

Mr. Carrigan, K.C., and Mr. Dudley White, K.C. (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted.

Mr. Price, K.C., and Mr. Nolan-Whelan (instructed by Mr. Charles Murray) appeared for McMullen.

Mr. Joseph O'Connor (instructed by Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Co.) appeared for Peter Jordan.

Mr. Price, K.C., said that before the jury were called and sworn he wished to raise an objection to the re-trial of this case.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—The re-trial will proceed.

Mr. Price said that he must put his objection. He objected to his client's being further tried on an indictment for wilful murder, and urged that a fair trial could not be had. He objected to a trial on any higher charge than that of manslaughter. A jury had already been empanelled and agreed that they could find a verdict of manslaughter if they had the power to do so.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—That is not a correct statement.

Mr. Price—I submit that it is.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—It is a misapprehension.

Mr. Price said that he also applied for a postponement. The learned judge's direction to the jury, he held, was not in accordance with the law in the instructions he gave to the jury, and which——

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—What were the words you refer to?

Mr. Price—I have not got the exact words.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—You take an objection, yet you have not the words you object to. I do not want generalities. I ask you to read the words you refer to.

Mr. Price—The shorthand writer can read them.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—I understand this thing perfectly well. Let the jury be called.

Mr. Carrigan, K.C.—It is a most unprecedented proceeding.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—I have had fifty years' experience, and I never heard of such a thing from a member of the Bar. It is absolutely unprecedented. The re-trial proceeds. I never heard such a point raised or argued.

Mr. Price said that he was not arguing. He was only making his objection, and he would not make it if he did not think it to be his duty, and he expected to do it without comment.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—Comment from whom and to whom?

Mr. Price—To me, in my position at the Bar.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—I shall make any comment I think right and proper.

Mr. Price—I make my objection.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy—And I refuse your application.

CASE RE-OPENED.

The jury having been sworn,

Mr. Carrigan, K.C., re-opened the case. He recalled the evidence given at the previous trial, and traced the movements of the accused from the time of their starting in a taxicab from the Ormond Hotel, Dublin, to the bank at Baltinglass; the "hold up" of Mr. Woulfe, the manager, who was shot at; the murder of O'Halloran subsequently at the bridge, and the arrests and admissions of both Jordan and McMullen. These men were engaged in committing a felony at the bank, and if a man had the public spirit to pursue a felon so engaged and was killed in carrying out that duty it was murder, and nothing else.

The evidence given at the previous trial was then repeated.

None of the witnesses for the prosecution was cross-examined by counsel for the defence.

The case for the prosecution having closed, Mr. Price opened the defence of M'Mullen. He contended that the charge of wilful murder had not been sustained. The case for the defence, in regard to the shooting of the Guard was that the prisoner fired as he was escaping without premeditation, and did not know that O'Halloran had even been struck until he read it in the newspapers. The firing was not of that malicious or deliberate kind which would be essential to sustain the charge of murder. Unfortunately, some time ago "holding up" banks was not regarded in the country as a moral evil by men who, in other respects, as in the case of his client, had borne the highest character.

The prisoner M'Mullen received a good character.

Colonel Dalton said that he had found M'Mullen a very good officer, sober and reliable.

John Jordan, brother of the accused, Jordan, in answer to Mr. O'Connor, said that his reputation since he left the National Army, was exceptionally good. There never had been anything against him.

CLOSING STATEMENTS.

Mr. Nolan-Whelan addressed the jury on behalf of McMullen. He dwelt upon the fact he had, in the words of General M'Keown, borne a high and irreproachable character, and said that he was a man who was incapable of committing the crime of wilful murder. A person might be a bank robber and not a murderer. On the evidence, and on the conflicting statements, he contended that his client must get the benefit of the reasonable doubt that unquestionably existed. He asked for no consideration of mercy, but for justice. It would be useless, on the eve of an execution, for them to say to themselves: Was there a reasonable doubt which they ignored? It would then be too late.

Mr. Joseph O'Connor, for Jordan, pointed out that it had not been even alleged that his client had fired the fatal shot, but yet it was rather urged that because McMullen had pulled the trigger Jordan was to be executed. Here, admittedly, the prisoners went out to commit a felony, which they had to abandon, and it was in their escape that the Guard was shot, but not by the hand of Jordan. How, therefore, could he legally be found guilty of the wilful murder of O'Halloran, an act which never had been contemplated when they conspired to rob the bank?

Mr. Carrigan, K.C., replied for the prosecution.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy, in charging the jury, quoted the evidence in detail, and said that the law, from the earliest days, had cast around the peace officer the ægis of its protection. Here, after an effort to complete a felony, the accused were pursued, and if one of them had caused the death of that officer both were guilty of murder. That was exactly what occurred here, and the facts were unquestioned and unquestionable. If they looked at the case from beginning to end they found these two men together. He asked the jury, if they believed the evidence, to act accordingly, and, as this was the beginning of an effort to produce a reign of law and justice, to do their duty according to their oaths.

THE VERDICT.

The jury, after an absence of forty minutes, returned into court with their verdict. They found Peter Jordan "not guilty" and Felix McMullen "guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy."

McMullen, when asked if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed on him, said—"I am very sorry that the Guard was killed, but I never fired a shot with the intention of killing anyone."

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy then put on the black cap and sentenced McMullen to be hanged on Friday, 1st August.

Jordan was put back until this morning, it being stated that there was a further charge against him.

After the pronouncement of the sentence, Mr. Price, K.C., applied for a certificate from his lordship to enable him to lodge an appeal in the case of McMullen.

Mr. Justice O'Shaughnessy refused the application.

DUBLIN AND THE PROVINCES.

DUBLIN.

A SHORT SITTING.—The weekly meeting of the Dublin Port and Docks Board was carried through yesterday in fifteen minutes, although there were 26 items on the agenda.

BRAY TRADE COUNCIL.—At the annual meeting of the Bray Trade and Labour Council Mr. James Murphy (N.U.R.) was elected president; Mr. J. McGarry (Teachers' Organisation), vice-president; Mr. T. Waldron (Distributive Workers), treasurer; and Mr. J. Dunne (Transport Union), secretary. Mr. James Lynch (N.U.R.) was appointed delegate to the Trades' Congress.

In the Dublin Police Courts yesterday, Charles Dorban, 13 Sandwith place, an ex-soldier, was sent to prison for one month for assaulting a police sergeant when arrested on a charge of maliciously breaking a table owned by a woman who lived in the same house. The defendant pleaded that he acted in self-defence. He was ordered to pay 10s. compensation in respect of the table.

AMMUNITION IN A BED.—Peter Whelan, Mountain View Cottages, Terenure, described as a labourer, was sent to prison for six weeks in the Police Court yesterday for being unlawfully in possession of ammunition. The defendant's father, James Whelan, gave evidence of finding the ammunition under the mattress of his son's bed. FINANCE BILL IN THE SENATE.

the recommendation, as the proposal in the bill would be very harsh.

Mr. Jackson, supporting the recommendation, said that because of that particular clause in the bill many big houses in the West of Ireland were vacant, and people were afraid to rent them.

THE WRONG TIME.

Mr. Douglas said that the present time was most inopportune to introduce such a proposal as the bill contained, for it discouraged the renting of large houses, which for many reasons it was most desirable to see inhabited. Many of these large houses could be divided and let to two persons, but unless the owner did the whole of the repairs he would not get any deduction, and very often he would be able only to let part of the house.

Mr. Farren said that the allowance ought to be made to persons who resided in their own houses. There would be many such persons in Dublin in the near future who would be able to buy their houses on the instalment purchase system.

The President said that he hoped that there would be a great many owners of small houses in Dublin, and in that connection it was but fair to ask where they got the money to purchase. On examination it would be found that the Government subsidies had enabled many of them to become the owners of their own houses. It was, he continued, a question of how far it was possible to get in sufficient money to enable the revenue of the State to meet the expenditure.

In that particular case there might be some hardship on owners of property who were favourably situated during a considerable term of years, but the fact was that in the vast majority of cases the poor law valuation, upon which the income tax was charged, was considerably less than the actual rent that was paid for any of those houses.

In quite a very large number of cases it would be found that not only in the country, but in the city the valuation bore no relation whatever to the actual rent. The valuation was made 50 or 60 years ago upon the then value of money. The value of money had changed, but the poor law valuation remained except in such cases as the Cities of Dublin, Belfast, and in a short time the City of Waterford, where revaluation had taken place.

REVALUATION OF DUBLIN.

The revaluation of the City of Dublin took place in 1916, but the alterations in the assessments in respect of income tax did not come into operation then. Owing to the occurrences of the last four years in the country it would probably be 1929 before the valuation office overtook its arrears of work.

In the majority of cases that had come before him the relation of valuation to capital was about 40 per cent. A house for which one paid £100 a year in Dublin would be found to have a valuation of £40. Farm houses did not come within the measure.

There was one class left, and it might be that there was a case in respect of those people. He knew that the Minister for Finance was keenly interested in retaining these people in the country, an evidence of which was that he reduced the super-tax. (Laughter.) There had been a considerable response even to that measure of relief by those people. He did not subscribe to some of the theories put forward, that a man with a certain income should be taxed. Those people performed useful and important functions in the State, and the Minister of Finance in giving them relief had that in his mind.

The recommendation was passed.

PARCELS TAX.

POSTPONED UNTIL SEPTEMBER

Sir Thomas Esmonde moved a recommendation to Section 23, which deals with stamp duty on Customs entries, and fixes July 15, 1924, as the date when all parcels imported into the Saorstat shall be stamped to the amount of sixpence. He moved that the date be the first day of September, 1924.

He said that the purpose of the tax was a very good one. It was not to be supposed that the revenue would profit much by this tax, but by it it was hoped to encourage a distribution trade in this country. It was not thought, however, that it could be operative before September.

The President accepted the recommendation.

The Finance Bill then passed through Committee.

The Unemployment Insurance Bill, 1924, passed the report stage, and, on the motion of Senator Farren, Standing Orders were suspended, and the bill became law.

RAILWAYS BILL.

The Railways Bill, 1924, was passed.

Mr. O'Farrell said that the bill gave private enterprise a chance under very favourable circumstances to justify its existence. No one would be more pleased than he if it succeeded. He congratulated Mr. McGilligan on the unmistakable ability and tact he had displayed in piloting the bill through the Senate.

Sir Thomas Esmonde, Sir John Keane, Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Dowdall, and the Chairman also spoke of the Minister's ability and courtesy.

The Oireachtas Witnesses' Oaths Bill, 1924, passed the second reading without discussion. The Private Bill Costs Bill, 1924, also passed the second stage.

The Local Elections Postponement (Amendment) Bill, 1924, received a second reading.

TRADE LOANS BILL.

On the second stage of the Trade Loans (Guarantee) Bill,

Sir John Keane put a number of queries. He asked why the banks could not do this business, and what class of business the Government would underwrite which would not be underwritten by the banks. Then, what class of security would the Government take? Presumably, they were going to take security that was not entirely satisfactory to the banks. Did the wording of Section 1 mean that the articles used in manufacture must be of Irish manufacture? Lastly, he remarked that the term, "working capital" was not defined in the bill.

Mr. H. S. Guinness responded to Sir John Keane's first question. Banks did not, he explained, lend money for long periods, or for works of certain classes which might come within the scope of the bill. The money for large works was found by the public, and unless the enterprise in itself had something inherent in it to attract the public's money, it could not be launched.

The plan embodied in the bill was to give such enterprises that security which would attract people to go into them. Banks would advance on securities for comparatively short periods, but not for financing capital expenditure of the description indicated.

The Minister for Industry and Commerce, replying on the discussion, said it seemed to him that the fact that such measures as that had been found necessary in England and other countries where industry required assistance implied a certain criticism of banking institutions all over the world—that they had not adapted themselves to the circumstances of the time. The main part of that Act was copied from the British Act, but he thought that Section 2 was new. It was the answer in so far as the Government had been able to find an answer, to the repeated claims that there should be brought in an anti-"profiteering" measure. Control measures during the war had created rings, owing to restriction of competition, and the only way to break rings was to encourage competition.

As to the amount available, the Minister for Finance had been so far prevailed upon that, if the working of Clause 2 was successful, further monies would be advanced for the purpose of either Clause 1 or Clause 2. It had been pretty well decided that of all the different projects put forward to revive or create industry in this country the Loans Guarantee measure was a better answer to the problem than fiscal adjustment—much better.

SAFEGUARDS.

With regard to securities, he pointed out that the Minister was rather carefully protected in the bill from guaranteeing anything until after the Advisory Committee had reported. The recommendation of the Advisory Committee was not automatically going to be accepted, but it had been thought advisable to remove the supervising machinery under the bill outside the Department.

The Minister would be the final person to sanction a guarantee, but he would guarantee only after schemes had run the gauntlet of criticism by the Advisory Committee, his own Department, and the Ministry for Finance.

Referring again to the amount available, he said that the Minister of Finance had guaranteed that there would be no holding up of schemes for want of money if the measure was going well. "We hope," he said, "to get the cost of living brought down with a run, and if that could only be achieved a great deal of our troubles would be overcome."

Mr. Guinness, referring to the Minister's remark concerning banks, said that bank directors had to be extremely careful. They could be prosecuted for misappropriation or negligence in the use of money deposited with them, and they had not the machinery for examination of schemes, nor the freedom, enjoyed by the Government.

Mr. McGilligan explained that in preparing the bill he had been faced with the question why the banks did not lend money for certain schemes. He quite realised that certain schemes put before him were beyond the purpose of ordinary banks. He did not mean that the production of guarantee schemes implied inefficient management of banks as they existed, but that banks had not been readjusted to the circumstances of the time.

The second reading of the measure was agreed to.

OTHER BILLS.

The Damage to Property (Compensation) (Amendment) Bill, 1924, and the Fisheries (Election of Conservators Postponement) Bill, 1924, passed through their second stages.

The Witnesses Oaths Bill, 1924, and the Private Costs Bill, 1924, to which the House had given a second reading, were referred to a Private Committee of the House.

The House then adjourned to 11 o'clock next Wednesday, and the consideration of the report on the temporary accommodation for the Oireachtas was fixed for three in the afternoon.

"I feel it my duty to let you know the results of Virol. When one month old, my little girl was at a standstill and nothing seemed to satisfy or suit her.
We tried different sorts of food, but did not get one to suit her until we tried Virol. After a fortnight's trial we could see the difference. She began to put on weight and seemed satisfied. Now (at 15 months) she is a big bonny baby, as you can see by her photo.
Thanking you for your wonderful food, which brought my little girl to what she is now, and assuring you of my recommendation for your food always."

SECONDARY TEACHERS' SALARIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—"Co-ordination" is the aim of the Minister for Education. Would that he were whole-hearted! He suggests a scale of salaries for secondary teachers, beginning at £200 and rising to £400 a year. Why did he not "co-ordinate" these salaries with the Civil Service scales? Two examples will suffice:—

Example.	University Standard.	Initial Salary.	Maximum Salary.	Pension.
a Customs—Excise...	First Year.	£208 p.a. (£4 a week)	£700 p.a. (£13 9/3 a week)	Half of retiring salary.
b Inspector of Taxes.	Honours Degree.	£260 p.a. (£5 a week).	£1,100 a year (£21 3/1 a week).	do.
c Registered Secondary Teacher.	Degree and Higher Diploma in Education.	£200 p.a. (£3 16/11 a week)	(£7 13/10 a week). £400 a year	None.

To get the Higher Diploma in Education at least one year must be spent in the university after obtaining a degree.

Facing these facts, can any member of the Dail say that even the barest justice is being meted out to secondary teachers, or can any one expect these teachers to remain in the Free State when they can get £100 a year more in Ulster or England?—Yours, etc.,

"CAP AND GOWN."

Allen (Phœnix), J. Harris (North Down).

PEMBROKE V. PHŒNIX.

Phœnix fielded a strong side yesterday at Sydney Parade, but suffered defeat from Pembroke by six wickets. Against some fine bowling by Maloney and Martin, the Park Club fared poorly, and in two hours were dismissed for 101. A. E. Wilkinson was the chief scorer with 37. He batted freely, getting his runs in half an hour and hitting six boundaries. The home fielding was particularly keen, Pickeman brought off several smart catches. Maloney took six wickets for 33 and Martin three for 57 runs. Thanks chiefly to a good stand by Robinson and Lawrence in support of the third wicket, Pembroke got the runs for the loss of four wickets. Robinson played a very fine innings, and at the finish was not out with 38. Lawrence got a pretty 24 which included many good strokes. Score:—

DUNDRUM ASYLUM v. UNIVERSITY COLLEGE II.

Dundrum had University College second XI. as visitors yesterday, and won by six wickets. Batting first on a soft wicket the Collegians knocked up 140 in one three-quarters hours. Their chief scorers were M. Walker (68) and L. O'Brien (27). Dundrum started badly, T. Doyle being clean bowled with the score at five. A fine partnership, however, between T. Buggy (60) and A. Campbell (34) enabled the home side to win easily. T. Buggy played splendidly, hitting freely on both sides of the wicket. Culhane and Cussen bowled well for the visitors, while for the home side Dr. Ackroyd took four wickets for 40 runs. Score:—

WARWICKSHIRE V. SOUTH AFRICANS.

The Edgbaston pitch retained its excellence yesterday, and Warwickshire used it to such advantage that they established a lead on the first innings of 123. Their total is the highest they have compiled this season, and on their present tour no other county has punished the Colonial bowling to the same extent. The batting honours were earned by Santall, who, going in first wicket down and fourth out, helped to raise the total from 76 to 311. His partnership with Calthorpe produced 129 in just under an hour and a half. Santall completed his first three figure innings for the county and hit thirteen fours. Another prolific partnership followed between Calthorpe and Kilner, who in fifty minutes added 92 for the fifth wicket. Bates afterwards batted skilfully for 76 in just over two hours, and Howell helped to add 43 for the last wicket. The Colonials had 25 minutes' batting, and scored as many runs without loss, so that they enter upon the concluding day 98 runs behind. In an attempt to take a hard return from Santall Pegler injured his right hand, and did not turn out after the tea interval. Meintjes fielding in his place. Score:—

SOMERSET V. DERBYSHIRE.

At Bath Derby easily saved the follow-on, but their batting was colourless, and Cadman, who was their top scorer, took two hours and a half over his 36. Heath was out to a very fine catch by Hunt in trying to hit White out of the enclosure for 6 twice in one over. White came out with the very fine analysis of five wickets for 25 runs, and he was well supported in the field. The home county, with a lead of 113 on the first innings, later built up a position that should lead to victory. Score:—

KENT V. LEICESTERSHIRE.

After some remarkable cricket, the second match of the Tunbridge Wells week yesterday resulted in a win for Kent by 169 runs, the Leicester last wicket falling at ten minutes to 6 o'clock. Kent had lost all the advantage gained on Wednesday when seven of their batsmen had fallen for the addition of 43, but, aided by a little luck, Collins and Wright added 105 in an hour and a half. All the other batsmen failed on a pitch that was treacherous as it dried under hot sunshine. Skelding and Geary bowled admirably, but their work was nothing compared with Woolley's in finishing off the match. The pitch had completely recovered, but Woolley went on after tea, when three men were out for 36, and, except for Sidwell (run out), the remaining batsmen fell to him. Admitting that Leicester were very weak in batting, it was an exceptionally good performance to take six wickets for 29. Score:—

OLYMPIC GAMES.

ANOTHER WORLD'S RECORD.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION FOREIGN SPECIAL.)

COLOMBES STADIUM, Thursday Night.

Brilliant, hot weather favoured the fourth day of the VIII. Olympiad, and the attendance showed a gratifying increase over the two previous days. The feature of the day was the wonderful running of the Finn, P. Nurmi, who accomplished a great double by taking the 1,500 Metres and the 5,000 Metres. In the latter event Nurmi went ahead, timing himself at every lap, as in the heats, but could not rid himself of his countryman Ritola, who hung on tenaciously, and at the finish was only two yards behind the winner. Nurmi seems invincible, and finished perfectly fresh. His time for the 1,500 metres, 3 mins. 53 3-5 secs., broke the Olympic record.

H. B. Stallard, the chief English hope in this race, collapsed badly after finishing third, and completely lost consciousness for some minutes. S. A. Spencer and D. G. A. Lowe carried him off. When he came round he complained of feeling very ill, and had pains in the head and in the arch of one foot. His collapse is attributed to the blazing heat which prevailed throughout the afternoon. His effort in the race was a magnificent one, though left a little too late. He lay sixth for most of the way, but when 200 yards from home came away into second place. Scharer, the Swiss, however, passed him almost on the tape, and beat him into third place. D. G. A. Lowe finished fourth.

Clibborn and Saunders, the British representatives in the 5,000 metres final, ran steadily together at fourth and fifth, respectively for the half distance, but they were obviously outclassed by the two Finns, Nurmi and Ritola, who fought out the finish together. Clibborn, however, added to Britain's points by running into sixth place.

Two field event finals were decided, both, as was expected, going to Americans. Tootell won the hammer, with a throw of 53.275 metres, or approximately 174ft. 7in. M. C. Nokes, the British champion, was third, with a throw of 48.875 metres, or approximately 159ft. 9in. Nokes's distance was first given as 48.74. The last contest of the afternoon—the pole vault final—resulted, after a very close fight, in a victory for Barnes (U.S.A.), whose winning jump was 3.80 metres, or approximately 12ft. 5¼in. Both Barnes and Graham (U.S.A.), who was second, however, had both previously tied at 3.95 metres. A height of 3.90 was set for the jump off, but both failed to clear it. It was lowered to 3.85, but again it was too high. Eventually Barnes got over the 3.80 mark, and Graham failed. Brooker (U.S.A.) and Petersen (Denmark) jumped off for third place, Brooker winning.

The 400 metres flat heats, which were run off, provided a sensation, when Imbach (Switzerland) scored the first success for his country at the Olympiad by breaking the world's record by 2-5ths of a second. He returned a time of 48 secs. dead, which, considering that he was not pressed at any time during the race, is most remarkable, and came as a great surprise. He was loudly cheered when his achievement was announced. Guy Butler (Great Britain) and H. E. Liddell (Great Britain) both qualified for the final, as did the two South Africans, L. B. Betts and C. W. Oldfield. There was said to be some doubt as to Butler's fitness, but he ran very convincingly, and won easily.

The official placings by countries at the end of the fourth day were as follows:—

America	177	points
Finland	103	points
Great Britain	46½	points
Sweden	34½	points
France	18½	points
Switzerland	10	points
Hungary	7½	points
South Africa	5	points
New Zealand	4	points
Canada	2	points

1,500 METRES FLAT.

Final—Nurmi (Finland), 1; Scharer (Sweden), 2; H. B. Stallard (Great Britain), 3; D. G. A. Lowe (Great Britain) 4. Nurmi's time, 3 mins. 53 3-5 secs., creates a new Olympic record.

5,000 METRES.

Final—Nurmi (Finland), 1; Ritola (Finland), 2; Wide (Sweden), 3. Won by two yards, in the Olympic record time of 14 mins. 31 1-5 secs. Clibbon (Great Britain) finished sixth, and thus scored points for Britain, but Saunders was a long way behind. Although only two yards separated Nurmi and Ritola, it was obvious that the winner had still something in hand.

THROWING THE HAMMER.

Final—Tootell (U.S.A.), 1; McGrath (U.S.A.), 2; M. C. Nokes (Great Britain), 3. Tootell threw 53.275 metres, or approximately 174 feet 7 inches. Nokes threw 48.74 metres, or approximately 157 feet 6 inches.

POLE JUMP.

Final—Barnes (U.S.A.), 1; Graham (U.S.A.), 2. Barnes and Graham tied at 3.95 metres, which equals the Olympic record. Both then failed at 4.00 metres. In the jump-off Barnes cleared 3.80 metres, at which Graham failed.

EPEE TOURNAMENT.—Fencers of nineteen nationalities entered, including Biscoe, Frater, Holt, and Montgomery for Great Britain. The first three qualified for the next round, but Montgomery was eliminated. Biscoe and Frater both won six victories out of nine, and Holt won four.

WITH THE IRISH TEAM.

(BY OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.)

PARIS, Tuesday.

In to-day's games Ireland had an immediate interest in two events, the 200 metres and putting the weight. In the former her representatives were W. Lowe, of Manchester and Belfast, and Sean Lavan, of University College, Dublin, and Co. Mayo, and in the weight W. O'Grady.

Though none of the three has gone through to win all did creditable performances. The first to appear was Lowe, who in the preliminary heat of the 220 metres won second place in a fast heat, the winner being Carr, of Australia, who in the next round was good enough to beat Liddell, the famous Edinburgh sprinter and football player.

To Lavan's fortune it fell to break a tape for the first time for Ireland in the Olympic Games. He had an excellent race, winning his heat without trouble. Unfortunately in the next round he met two of the fastest sprinters in the world, Carr and Liddell, and he failed to get a place. Lowe was not more lucky. Both are out of the finishing contests in this race.

O'Grady in the shot putting got in some good throws, between 40 and 45 feet, but he was outclassed by the putters from America.

The style of putting practised at the Olympic Games is strange to Irish eyes. All the longest putts appeared to be throws rather than putts, and would have been ruled out as fouls in any competition in the British Isles.

The games were visited during the afternoon by the Prince of Wales, who took much interest in the competitions. Entering the grounds he watched the starts of the 220 metres closely, and chatted with some of the competitors. He asked many queries of Lavan as to the performances of the Irish competitors, and was interested in the condition of athletic affairs in Ireland.

GOLF.

DUNCAN AND MITCHELL OUTPLAY HAGEN AND SMITH.

George Duncan and Abe Mitchell, who probably constitute the strongest partnership which Britain could put forward, yesterday outplayed the American pair, Walter Hagen and Macdonald Smith, in the first half of a 72 holes test match for stakes which in the aggregate amount to something like £1,000. This was played on the St. George's Hill course, Weybridge, which was selected by the American pair as the venue for their "home" half of the match, and the British pair gained a commanding lead of four holes.

Play opened quietly with 4's at the first two holes. Then at the short third Duncan was the only one to find the green, and he alone secured a 3 to give Great Britain the lead. At the fourth Hagen holed a six yards putt for a 3, and Mitchell holed one of two yards to get a half. Hagen had to putt for a half at the fifth, and was down from three yards to save the Americans, and at the next there was a remarkable exhibition of putting. Duncan, having driven into the rough, was short with his second, but holed a five-yarder for a 4. Mitchell followed by getting down from four yards for a 3, and Macdonald Smith, from a slightly lesser distance, also holed out for a 3. Fine 4's at the seventh was followed by 3's at the eighth, while at the ninth Hagen played a terrible shot from the tee, and pulled his ball out of bounds into the city pond. Smith played a great second shot to the green, with Hagen out of it, and then holed a two yards putt for a half. Thus, the British pair turned 1 up. Hagen beat Mitchell from the tee for the first time at the tenth, but he topped his second badly, and the ball ran over the green, but Smith was there for the half in 4. All four were putting for 2's at the eleventh, which was halved in 3. Then came disaster for the Americans. Hagen was four yards from the twelfth hole in 2. Duncan ran his third up to within a yard of the hole, and with Mitchell six yards away in 2 the British pair gained a 4. Hagen went for a 3, slid beyond the side of the hole, and missed his putt back of less than a yard, taking 5. Macdonald Smith had put his second into a bunker and his third beyond the green, so that Duncan and Mitchell won a hole which they might easily have lost. Hagen nearly holed his run up at the thirteenth, but got a 4, after which Duncan missed from about a yard and Mitchell from three yards, the Americans winning their first hole to become only 1 down again. Hagen holed a fifteen yards' curly putt for a 2 at the fourteenth, and Mitchell boldly putt down from 3 yards for a half. Mitchell was bunkered from his drive to the fifteenth, and Duncan sliced his into rough ground. Smith, on in 2, won the hole in 4, and the match was square. Both Americans took 3 to reach the sixteenth green, and Duncan holed in 4 for the lead again. At the seventeenth Duncan hit a great drive over 300 yards with a following wind, and he hit the pin with his second shot. Mitchell, just on in 2, hit the back of the hole for a 3, and with Duncan failing from three yards a half in 4 resulted. Both Duncan and Mitchell were on the eighteenth in 2, while the Americans both took 3 to the green. The British pair took 3 putts each, however, and the hole was halved in 5, so that the players went to lunch with Duncan and Mitchell leading by 1 hole.

The British pair started out well on the second round, for Duncan holed an eight yards putt for a 3, and a 2 holes lead. At the second Mitchell pulled badly into the rough, but his partner saved the situation by holing a putt of four feet for a half in 4. At the third Mitchell holed a beauty from fifteen yards for a 2, but Hagen holed his from three yards for another 2. The fourth went to America, Mitchell having found the wood and Duncan a bunker, over which Hagen jumped, the last-named getting a 3 to become 1 down. Duncan and Mitchell were both on the fifth with their seconds, while the Americans, bunkered together, required 3 to reach the green. Hagen made a fine approach, but Mitchell again putted well, and was down from five yards for a 3 to put his side 2 up again. Halves followed at the next three holes. At the ninth Mitchell was unlucky, for he was trapped in a long sand bunker with too long a drive. Smith was short, and Hagen and Duncan fought out the hole. Duncan putted badly and lost the hole, which he should have halved. At the tenth the Americans squared again, owing to their putting. Mitchell was the only one on the green in 2, but he missed a yard putt after Hagen had holed a four-yarder, and in consequence the British lead entirely disappeared. Then Duncan won the lead again. He hit his tee shot to the short eleventh to within a foot of the pin, and was not asked to hole out. Smith and Hagen were both on, but a long way from the hole, and they could not get down their putts. At the twelfth Duncan holed a long putt for a fine 3, and a two holes lead, and at the next Hagen had to putt for a half. At the fourteenth Duncan got another 3 for a three holes lead, but only a great brassie shot by Mitchell enabled the Britishers to halve the next. Mitchell and Smith reached the sixteenth green in two shots, and these two halved in 4. At the next Duncan played a fine mashie shot to the green, and holed a yard putt for a half. Smith and Mitchell fought a duel for the last hole. Smith played a beautiful pitch, which finished less than five yards from the pin, and Mitchell went one better by running up to within two yards and holing the putt for a 3, which enabled his side to finish with the biggest lead they had held during the day.

MINISTRY OF JUSTICE G.S.

MASTER DENNING'S CUP.

There was a fine entry for the handsome silver cup which Master Denning, K.C., the first Captain of the Society, presented to the Ministry of Justice G.S., for competition at Milltown yesterday, a number of well-known golfers from the various Dublin clubs taking out cards. The conditions were quite favourable, and the scoring all round was good. For a long time the best return was J. Dorgan's 77; but then Francis Horne came in with one less, only to be beaten by P. Sheehan, who off 16 won the Cup with 73 nett. Result:—P. Sheehan (16), 73; F. Horne (2), 76; J. Dorgan (8), 77.

LANCASHIRE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Details:—Third Round—D. E. B. Soulby (St. Annes Old) beat G. F. Noon (Didsbury)—3 and 2; H. Dodd Hesgeth (Southport) beat S. J. Robinson (Ainsdale)—2 and 1; Dr. T. W. G. THE FRENCH CHAMPIONSHIP.

MISS LEITCH WINS EASILY.

Miss Cecil Leitch (Carlisle and Silloth) gained her fifth victory in the French Open Ladies' Championship on Le Touquet course, Paris-Plage, yesterday. She was opposed by an American lady, Miss Maude Hunnewell, of Sunningdale, and after a few holes had been played the issue was never in doubt. The feature of Miss Leitch's game was her excellent wooden club play, and in this department of the game she outclassed her opponent. Miss Leitch was 3 up at the turn in the morning and 4 up at the end of the round. The only holes she lost were the sixth and eighteenth. The winner was dormie nine in the afternoon, and she settled the match on the next green, winning by 10 and 8.

YORKSHIRE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP

B. Wragg (Sheffield) and T. H. Slater (Brough) are the finalists in the Yorkshire Amateur Championship, which will be concluded at the Lindrick course, Sheffield, to-day. W. C. MacFarlane (Cleveland), the holder, was beaten in the fifth stage yesterday, while Charles Hodgson (Baildon), a former holder, playing his short game very badly, went down unexpectedly to Slater.

PROFESSIONALS AT CLEETHORPES.

To celebrate the opening of the reconstructed course of the Grimsby and Cleethorpes Club, Havers, J. H. Taylor, Ray, and Vardon engaged in exhibition matches yesterday. In a four-ball match in the morning Havers and Taylor defeated Vardon and Ray by 2 and 1. The winners had a best ball score of 71. In the afternoon another four-ball match was played, in which Taylor and Ray, with a best ball score of 65, beat Vardon and Havers by 6 and 5.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE.

MINK'S FATAL FALL.

BLACK FRIAR SCORES AGAIN.

PERAHARA UNPLACED.

From Our Travelling Correspondent.

SALISBURY, Thursday Night.

It is regrettable to have to record the death from an accident of that very good Irish-bred filly, Mink, the property of Mrs. Whitburn. She was at exercise in a paddock when she reared up and fell backwards, sustaining such injuries that she had to be destroyed. Her death is a great loss to Mrs. Whitburn, who gave her breeder, Mr. E. F. Barry, of Fermoy, 550 guineas for her as a yearling. After winning at Epsom she ran third in the Oaks two days later, and fourth in the Royal Hunt Cup after swerving. Indeed, I was very much looking forward to seeing her win the Liverpool Cup the week after next, when she was nicely handicapped with 7st. 7lb.

A FIFTH SUCCESSIVE WIN.

The Bibury Club Meeting ended rather tamely this afternoon. It was, however, marked by a sparkling performance on the part of Black Friar, who, with odds of 3 to 1 laid on him, trotted in for the Champagne Stakes and gained his fifth successive victory. It is much to be hoped that the owners of Black Friar and Diomedes will put them in the Hurst Park Great Two-Year-Old Stakes in November, if they have not met before. The opposition of this pair would be most interesting.

Donoghue and his boy were again in opposition in the Tisbury Selling Plate. This time the father won, his mount, the Last of the Lenas filly, squeezing home by a neck from Hiram. Major Doyle rode the favourite in both the Bibury Club members' races. Perahara was, however, beaten out of a place in the welter, Captain Cyril Kirk winning on Sancroft by six lengths from Mr. G. Gunter on Rivolta. On Erskine Major Doyle was beaten a length and a half in the Wallop Plate by Mr. Pat Dennis on One Guinea.

Mr. P. W. Shaw's Neil Day was well supported in the Alington Plate, but he failed to get placed behind Vic's Choice.

I notice, by the way, that Mr. Shaw's fine sprinter, Belsize, who had already been backed for the Stewards' Cup, is advertised for sale by private treaty in the Racing Calendar.

TO-MORROW'S FANCIES.

There will be good racing to-morrow at Lingfield, to which Straitlace has not been sent to run in the Lingfield Park Plate. His stable companion, SPALPEEN, runs instead, and he should beat the sensational Ascot winner, Blue Pete. RED LETTER runs for the Summer Handicap and she should win, with Jansan as her most dangerous opponent.

Good sport should also be seen at Pontefract, where I recommend an each way investment on Lady Fitzwilliam's FRAXINELLA in the Prince of Wales's Plate. This filly has been well galloped by Lord G. Dundas, and she is greatly expected to win. She has, of course, the very useful North-country two-year-old Roidore to beat. HURRYBELLE is a likely winner of the Kilnwick Handicap. Another couple of likely winners are SMOKE SCREEN in the Airedale Handicap and GLENNELL in the Went Selling Plate.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

The following have been elected members of the Jockey Club:—Lord Stanley and Major Giles Loder.

A general meeting of the National Hunt Committee will be held at the Registry Office, London, on July 21, at noon.

Mr. Parkinson, the Maddenstown Lodge trainer, brought off a double event at Dundalk yesterday by the aid of Templelyon and Broken Vow; and J. Dines, as on the previous day, rode two winners.

After the race for the Park Hill Maiden Plate at Pontefract yesterday, the Stewards fined Ledson, Leach, and Elliott each £5 and Cooper 2 guineas for not mounting when ordered.

At Pontefract yesterday afternoon the late Mr. W. Brown's horses were put up for sale. Marsin was sold to C. R. Barron for 250 gns.; Myra Gray to R. W. Armstrong, jun., for 410 gns.; Dobrett to R. W. Armstrong for 134 gns.; Ramda to Mr. King for 10 gns.; and Kingthorpe to Mr. King for 26 gns.

After passing the post as winner of the Alexandra Handicap at Pontefract yesterday, Honey Guide slipped up, Robbins being thrown clear. The jockey escaped injury and weighed-in all right. The Stewards passed him at the scales, and on inquiry as to the cause of the horse's fall, came to the conclusion that it was entirely accidental.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO MINK.

We understand that Mink reared up at exercise, and injured herself so badly that she died during Wednesday night. The three-year-old daughter of Marten ran third to Straitlace and Plack in the Oaks, and subsequently finished fourth in the Royal Hunt Cup.

DUNDALK.

FAVOURITES BEATEN.

The weather, while not so genial as on the first afternoon, remained fine for most of the time on the concluding day of the meeting, but overnight rain left the course in a rather holding state. Fields did not work out so satisfactorily, and the racing, on the whole, was not up to the standard of the previous afternoon, while backers, unlike their experience of Wednesday, had a couple of bad reverses.

The Holiday Hurdle Race, the opening event on the card, was the medium for plenty of speculation, Landman and Ennel Beg being the ones most inquired after. Landman was prominent for a long way, but he gave way at half the distance to Pullman, who quickly moved up from last to first position. In the straight Sea Mirage and Ennel Beg momentarily looked like tackling Pullman, but he stayed on well and won with a bit to spare. Templelyon, who started a hot favourite for the Irish Cesarewitch last year, had a much easier task when turning out to oppose four moderate horses in the Kilkerley Plate. Smart Sinner kept with him for a long way, and but for losing ground at a couple of the hurdles would probably have been nearer to Templelyon at the finish. As it was, the latter had to be hard ridden to win by three lengths.

Odds were laid on Broken Vow to beat six others in the 'Chasers' Plate, and these were easily landed. Radio Girl, another odds-on favourite for the Louth Plate, ran in disappointing style, and could only finish third of three runners, well beaten by Arfenarf and Snare. Dizira made a promising début in the Clanbrassil Plate, which she won after a stiff set-to with Duke of Judea, who was only caught in the last few strides; but the probability is that but for a slow beginning Striped Silk would have beaten both. Merry Miner won the Stewards' Plate in easy style. Details:—

YACHTING.

THE CLYDE FORTNIGHT.

The 12-metre and the 6-metre races at the Royal Western Club's Regatta on the Firth of Clyde yesterday resulted in additional winning pennants for Noresca and Coila III. respectively. In the principal event the Clyde-designed Moyana made a better show against Noresca than she has done of late. Moyana was leading in the beat down Channel, but Sir William Burton and Mr. R. Perry's Noresca ultimately won easily by 7 mins. Noresca has thus won in every race since the Clyde yachting started. In the 6-metre class, Coila III. secured her fiftieth victory and she also holds six seconds. Caryl was second yesterday, Ingomar third and Sonoma fourth.

Vanity and Heira II. were still absent from the 12-metres. With a view of having Heira II. in the King's Cup race at Rothesay, the Royal Northern Committee have postponed the match from to-morrow to Monday next, and she is then expected to join Noresca and Moyana, but Vanity will not be ready.

GAELIC GAMES.

4th INFANTRY BRIGADE CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The weather was dull and misty at Limerick last evening when, at the Markets Field, the 4th Infantry Brigade Army Championships in Football and Hurling took place between the 14th Battalion (Kerry) and the 10th Battalion (Limerick). The games, particularly the football match, were fairly well contested. The Kerry team were always superior to their opponents, and the game ended in a win for them by 2 goals and 3 points to 1 goal.

The hurling proved disappointing, as at no stage of the contest was Kerry dangerous. Limerick, never being seriously pressed, won easily by the heavy score of 16 goals to nothing.

TO-DAY'S SELECTIONS.

The Pontefract Meeting concludes to-day. There does not appear likely to be any improvement in the strength of fields, but there should be some interesting racing. There is to be a strong Southern opposition to the North in the Prince of Wales's Plate, though neither Dalmagarry nor Chang Chia may run. I think the honours will go to the North. Maxim Gun was quietly fancied at Newcastle and Carlisle, but for the winner I look to Roidore, who ran Iron Mask to three-quarters of a length in the Seaton Delaval Stakes at Newcastle, and previously ran prominently at Manchester and York. The Kilnwick Handicap appears to rest between Hurrybelle and Tactless. The former was well backed when beaten by Halidome at Newmarket recently, with some useful animals behind her. Tactless ran well at Carlisle, but I think Mr. Ash's filly represents the best form, even with 9st. in the saddle. The best in the Airedale Handicap I take to be Willow Pattern, Battery Smoke, and Red Cyder. The last-named disappointed at Windsor, but she has fair form, and I take her to win. Selections:—

Airedale Handicap—Red Cyder.
Brackenhill Handicap—House of Keys.
Went Plate—J. Renwick's selected.
Prince of Wales's Plate—Roidore.
Kilnwick Handicap—Hurrybelle.
Duchy Plate—Aerostar.

LINGFIELD.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME AND SELECTIONS.

The week's racing will be rounded off at Lingfield, where some good racing is promised. Pontefract clashes on the first day, but it should have little effect on this popular Southern fixture. The course is naturally firm but considered in excellent condition. Chief interest will centre in the Lingfield Park Plate, for which many had marked Straitlace to supply the winner. She does not run, however, her stable companion, Spalpeen, doing duty. He is an unreliable sort of a customer, though he appears to have mended his ways of late. I do not, however, like this sort, and shall look elsewhere for the winner. Papyrus will be another notable absentee. Woodend is to run, and I can fancy him quite a lot, as I cannot believe his Ascot form is correct. Blue Pete won with a lot in hand when beating Shambles, Green Fire and company at Ascot, but I think this form hardly good enough, and for the winner I shall look to Watford, a good-looking and fast-improving son of Swynford, of whom I feel confident we have yet to see the best. For the Summer Handicap Stakes I like Harrovian, Border Ranger, and Ne Koul. The first-named is a greatly improved horse, but, I fear, has too much weight. Border Ranger easily defeated Boddam and Scapin here in May, but for the winner I shall look to Ne Koul. Selections:—

Waterside Plate—Gniocchi.
Batnors Plate—True Grit.
Lingfield Park Plate—Watford.
Summer Stakes—Ne Koul.
Jack's Bridge Plate—Dalkeith filly.
Oak Tree Plate—Vesper Bell.

ALL-IRELAND CLUB.

THE LADIES' CUP TOURNAMENT.

Another match in the Ladies' Cup Tournament was played at the A.I.P.C., Phœnix Park, yesterday in fine weather and before a fair attendance. The teams were Hillbrook and Ardsallagh. Mr. A. M'Cann was unable to turn out for Ardsallagh, and his place was taken by Mr. T. Arnott. It was a fast and well contested game with plenty of open play, and in winning by a margin of two goals Hillbrook must be considered a trifle lucky.

Both sides were well mounted. Hillbrook ran up three goals before the other scored, but Ardsallagh experienced the worst of luck with some shots. Major O'Reilly was always to the fore, while Captain Goulding kept his side well backed up. Mr. Slocock was good, and Mr. Lillis played a hard game. Ardsallagh combined well, but there were times when they were not together. Mr. Maxwell Arnott and Mr. Leonard stood out prominently in individual efforts.

HILLBROOK (3) v. ARDSALLAGH (1).

In the first period there was any amount of hard riding, and the ball was whipped up and down quicky. On one occasion Mr. M. Arnott put in a grand gallop along the boards, but he was baulked by one of his own team when about to shoot. Just on time Major O'Reilly got possession from a throw in, and raced clean away to score a good goal. Hillbrook launched a strong attack in the second chukkar. Captain Goulding missed an easy shot, but shortly afterwards Major O'Reilly tipped through the goal after striking the post with his first shot. They had only just begun the next period when Captain Goulding scored a fine goal with a long shot. Hillbrook got away again from the throw in, but were repulsed, and Mr. Leonard put in a good run down the centre, but lost possession. There was some fine open play in this period, and although Ardsallagh got within easy range on more than one occasion they failed to reduce their arrears, and Hillbrook entered upon the last chukkar with a lead of three goals.

Ardsallagh pressed at the start, and Mr. O'Reilly had hard lines with a shot, the ball going inches wide. Hillbrook got down with the [illegible], and Mr. Lillis went near scoring, while a minute later Captain Goulding had bad luck with a good shot. Ardsallagh scored their only goal shortly afterwards, Mr. T. Arnott following in a shot by Mr. Leonard to hit through. Teams:

Hillbrook—Mr. F. J. Lillis, Major O'Reilly, Mr. E. S. Slocock, and Captain Lingard Goulding (back).

Ardsallagh.—Mr. J. A. Leonard, Mr. T. Arnott, Mr. Maxwell Arnott, and Mr. H. O'Reilly (back).

Umpires—Mr. R. H. Usher and Mr. J. Shackleton.

To-morrow—Ramblers v. Wanderers, 4.30 p.m. Teams:—

Ramblers—Mr. F. J. Lillis, Mr. J. A. Leonard, Mr. J. A. B. Trench, and Mr. E. S. Slocock.

Wanderers—Mr. J. P. A. Larminie, Mr. H. O'Reilly, Mr. B. O'Reilly, and Mr. J. W. Shackleton.

Practice at 5.30 p.m.

IRISH STOCK EXCHANGES.

DUBLIN.

IDLE MARKETS. BRITISH FUNDS IRREGULAR. BANK STOCK INTERIM DIVIDEND INCREASED. RAILS IRREGULAR. COTTONS GOOD ON FINAL DIVIDEND STATEMENT. TOBACCOS SUPPORTED.

There was again a very quiet market for Stock Exchange securities on 'Change yesterday, with several sections quite idle or neglected. Government National Sterling Loan was firm throughout the day. Outside of War Loan 5 p.c. stock, which improved, British Funds show occasional declines with Funding Loan. Irish Land and India Stocks quite slack and dull. Dublin Corporation stock was in demand and advanced. Banks were steady, with Royals a further fraction higher and Nationals the turn easier. Breweries and Distilleries were well held, but, except in Guinness issues, very little business was current. Marconi Ord. shares slipped back a little further, but Canadians rallied to over 5s., while Radio Corporation Common declined. Home Railway Ord. stocks were dull and on offer, but Pre-Ord. issues were harder where quoted. Trams, Bakery, Drapery, Tyres, and Dunlops were all idle. Tobaccos were very firm, with chief strength in British-Americans. English Sewing Cotton Ord. were strong on the final dividend statement, which was up to full expectations. Textiles otherwise were little altered on the day. Oils were dull.

Government 5 p.c. National Sterling Loan was a firm market at 93.

In British Funds, War Loan 5 p.c. rose ⅛ to 101¼, but Funding Loan fell ⅜ to 87⅞, Irish Land 3 p.c. ⅜ to 65¾, and India 3½ p.c. ¼ to 55¾, while Guaranteed 2¾ p.c. Land stock repeated 55½.

In Corporation, etc., issues, Dublin 3½ p.c. rose 1½ to 70.

Among Banking securities, Bank of Ireland stock repeated 274 and Hibernians 7⅝, but Nationals fell ⅛ to 19¼, while Royals rose ⅛ to 13¼.

In Breweries, etc., Guinness Ord. repeated 41¼, the Pref. 12, and Dublin Distillers Pref. 70s., while Castlebellingham and Drogheda Ord., for a broken lot, fell 1s. to 7s.

Dundalk Steam repeated 81s. 3d.

Marconi Ord. fell 3d. to 31s. 9d., and Radio Common 6d. to 18s., but ditto Preferred rose 1½d. to 18s. 6d. and Canadian Marconi 4½d. to 5s. 1½d.

Home Railways were a little irregular, probably owing to the general paucity of orders. Dublin and South-Eastern Ord. towards the close rose ½ to 16½, after all offered at 16 had been absorbed, but Dublin and Kingstown Leased Line rose a further 1 to 97 for any stock obtainable. Great Southern and Western Ord. fell ½ to 44, and Midland Great Western Ord. also relapsed ½ to 33½, while the 4 p.c. Debs. of the latter rose ½ to 65.

For an odd lot of Parent Tyre Ord. 17s. 4½d. was paid, or 4½d. over last marking here.

Among Manufacturing shares, British-American Tobacco opened 1s. 4½d. better at 107s. 10½d., but later reacted to 107s. 6d. Imperials were called 77s. 3d., 77s. 9d., nominally, but at the later session fetched 77s. 3d. English Sewing Cotton rose 1s. 3d. to 54s., 54s. 3d., and Coats Ord. 1½d. to 61s. 3d., 61s. 4½d., with the "B" Pref. steady at 23s. 9d. Bradford Dyers fell 3d. to 60s. 7½d. Helys Ord. repeated 25s. Matterson Pref. rose 7d. to 48s. 6d.

In Trading, etc., Brooks Thomas Ord. repeated 25s. J. C. Parkes and Sons Pref. improved 4½d. to 13s. x.d. Dublin Artisans Dwellings repeated 5⅜.

Other business done included British Celanese Ord. at 8s. 8½d. and Mexican Eagle Ord. at 14s. 4½d., 14s. 3d., the latter a fall of 6d.

LONDON STOCKS QUIET.

RUBBER SHARES A FEATURE.

Business on the Stock Exchange yesterday was restricted by the final phase of the settlement, but a firm tone was in evidence generally. The feature of the day was the revived demand for Rubber shares. Home Rails, which have been declining for some time past, were steady at overnight levels. Quietude prevailed at the close. In gilt-edged securities, British Funds were practically without alteration. War Loans remained at previous quotations, with the exception of the 4½ p.c., which dropped ⅛ to 97. Victory Bonds, on the other hand, closed ⅛ higher at 92⅞. Indias were firm, while Local Loans, after being lower, hardened and finished unchanged.

FOREIGN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES were dull. Brazilians suffered a set-back, and prices were quoted from a point to 2 points lower. The 4 p.c., 1889, at 44, and the Funding, 1914, at 73, closed 2 points down. French Fives were unchanged at the close, but the Fours, at 18, registered a fall of ½. Chinese issues were firm, with the exception of the 5 p.c., 1896, which lost ¼ to 93½. Among the Scrips, the premium on Hungarian Loan disappeared, while Czecho-Slovakia dropped to ¼ dis.

HOME RAILS were quiet. Resistance was offered to the falling prices in this department, and as a result quotations generally closed without alteration. The only exception was Great Westerns, which finished ½ higher at 107. Underground issues repeated previous prices.

COLONIAL and FOREIGN RAILS were lower. Buenos Ayres Great Southern, at 87½, and the Western at 73, both dropped ½. Antofagasta, at 85, and Entre Rios 6 p.c. Cum.-Pref., at 77, were also both ½ lower. Leopoldina lost ½ to 24½. San Paulo, at 158, finished 2 points down, while United Havana shed ½ to 86½.

OIL SHARES QUIET.

MEXICAN EAGLE DEALINGS.

The Oil Market had a very quiet appearance yesterday, and there was only a comparatively small attendance of members, transactions being on a small scale. Leading shares generally preserved a steady tone, but an irregular tendency prevailed among the other favourites. The report of the Mexican Eagle proved to be a keen disappointment to those optimists who were buying so freely on the preceding day, and the shares opened at an early hour, being quoted appreciably below the overnight's level. The shares made a partial recovery in the afternoon, but slipped back again in the street dealings, the Common, 8 p.c. Part. Prefs., and the 7 p.c. Prefs. all showing appreciable losses. Shells, which were dealt in ex the dividend of 12½ per cent., kept within narrow limits, and finished without alteration. Royal Dutch had also a quietly steady appearance. Burmas had an improving tendency at one time, but were unchanged, and Anglo-Persians also closed without alteration. Following a firm start Phœnix came on offer, and finally registered a decline, the dulness at the end being attributable to disappointment on the part of those who had anticipated an increase in the output last month, having regard to the report of the completion of new wells. INDUSTRIALS CHEERFUL.

TOBACCO SHARES RECEDE.

A cheerful tone prevailed in the Industrial and Miscellaneous markets yesterday, helped by the unchanged Bank rate, and, while business was of the usual midsummer proportions, features of interest were not lacking. A good deal of attention was again devoted to Tobacco shares. Imperials encountered sellers, and quickly receded to lower levels, closing no better than 76s. 3d. B.A.T.'S had a similar experience. The Motor group had a firmer appearance, although price changes were few. Austin Debs. were again moderately active; the "A" Prefs. held steady at 7s. 6d., while the "B" Pref. hardened to 4s. Dunlop were a shade better at 7s. 6d.; Coventry Chains ruled firm at 30s. 9d. Newspaper issues were less active, but prices were well maintained, Associated Def. practically recovering the dividend at 5⅛ ex div. "Daily Mirrors" lost ⅛, and "Sunday Pictorials" ⅛. "Daily Mail" Debs. further improved, and Allied Prefs. were a better market. Cements were unaffected by the resignation of the Chairman. The 1st Debs. were marked up to 84. Renewed support for Watney Def. was forthcoming, and the Stock rose to 215½, with business up to 217. Under this lead the general list had a tendency to improve, Ind Coopes putting on ⅛ and Hoares ⅛. Land shares had an irregular appearance. The demand for Electric Supply Corporations up to 26s. 6d. was the principal feature of the Electrical group. A fair degree of activity was noticeable in Textile shares, and numerous rises were recorded. A feature was the strength of English Sewing Cottons, which rose to 54s. 9d. Bleachers advanced 6d., and Fine Spinners a like amount. Amalgamated Cottons came into request and closed firm at 8s. 6d., rather buyers. Lister and Jos. Hoyles also registered gains. Courtaulds were subdued and, allowing for the dividend, closed unchanged at 63s. 6d. ex div.

Among Stores, Harrods were most prominent. Other favourites closed without quotable alteration. Shipping issues were inclined to improve; P. and O. Def. put on 2 to 287. A bright spot was the demand for Cressingtons, which closed 1s. 6d. better at 34s., with buyers still in evidence. Elder Dempster Pref. rose 6d. to 19s. 6d., and Furness Withys changed hands several times at 31s. 6d. Among Insurances, Londons were again a good market, and rose ⅛. Caledonians were easier at 14⅞. Marconi issues gave way, the Ords. closing ⅛ down at 1⅛, and the P. ⅛ at 1⅛. Nitrates were irregular. Anglo-Chilians put on 1s. to 68s. Lautaro New Debs. held firm at ½ prem. Quotations for recent new issues were maintained at previous levels. Dealings commenced in British Auto Traction New Debs. at 3 discount.

OIL OUTPUT.

British Burmah Petroleum Co. production of crude oil and the Rangoon Oil Co. for month of June amounted to 52,650 barrels.

LONDON MINING MARKET FIRM.

CONFIDENT FEELING IN MOST DEPARTMENTS.

Although business in the "House" was again on a modest scale yesterday, a rather more confident feeling pervaded several departments and the tone generally remained quite firm. Among Mines, Kaffirs could not be described as active, but there were still some bright spots. There seems no doubt in the minds of those in a position to judge that the new Union Government has no intention of interfering with the development of the mining industry on economic lines, and that no apprehensions need be entertained by shareholders that their interests will not be fully safeguarded. Most of the usually active counters were content to maintain former levels, the trifling amount of business causing them to move within narrow limits. Anglo-American were harder, but Central Mining, Rand Mines and Randfontein lost the turn. East Rand were again a centre of activity, but it would appear that many operators have been carefully studying the statements made by the Chairman at the meeting held in Johannesburg in May, and on balance the shares were lower. Consolidated Main Reef were strong, as were also Central West, Witwatersrand Deep, and Robinson Deep B, but all told the changes did not amount to much, and as Paris and the Cape were indifferent, the whole situation became very quiet towards the close. There was again a considerable liveliness apparent in the Rhodesian department, and many shares which have recently been more or less dormant were being inquired for. Cam and Motor, Rezende, and Globes were all better, and there was a disposition to pick up several of the lower-priced descriptions, among which Mashonaland Agency, ex-Lands, and Bechuanaland Exploration figured, the last-named on the strong position which the company now occupies. Diamonds were somewhat irregular. De Beers Def. put on half a crown, but Premier Pref. were down to this extent. Consolidated Diamonds came into request on rumours that the company has obtained better terms under the agreement with the Diamond Syndicate. Some Cape support was forthcoming for the shares. The price of tin further declined to £220 12s. 6d., a fall of £2 on the day, without having much influence on the share market. Rio Tintos hardened, but Russo-Asiatic eased on profit-taking. Closing prices:—

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

The long-awaited report for the past year of the Mexican Eagle Oil Company, published in our issue of yesterday, shows that the trading profit, arrived at after charging the whole of the exploration outlays, was £1,076,690 (converting Mexican dollars at the nominal rate of 10 to the £), against £2,401,714 in 1922, and that the net profit was £484,475, against £1,997,702. Of the available balance of £923,507, the dividends on the First Preference shares absorbed £409,368, leaving £514,139 to be carried forward, against £463,255 brought in. With regard to the efforts made by the company to bring in new production, the report states that work in outlying districts became extremely difficult in the latter months of the year owing to local unrest. Ample funds are stated to be available for the completion of the company's extensive exploration programme. In the current year the company's operations have been adversely affected by political conditions in Mexico, and more particularly by the prolonged strike at its Tampico Refinery.

A further instalment of £566,700 has been received by the Imperial Continental Gas Association from the Clearing Office (Enemy Debts) in respect of the compromise award of £1,550,000 on account of the outstanding balance of the Association's German claim under the Peace Treaty. Of this instalment £386,916 represents a realised accretion to capital, and with the undistributed balance of previous instalments will permit of a special distribution of 19½ per cent. (not liable to income or super tax), the necessary resolution for which will be submitted at the meeting in May next year. The balance of £179,783, being revenue, will be included in the revenue accounts for 1924.

Shareholders of Preserve Manufacturers, the company which was formed in 1919 to acquire the business of Carr White and Co., Wigton, Cumberland, and had an issued capital of £385,000, since reduced to £105,000, have decided to wind up the business. There was only one dissentient. It may be recalled that a Receiver was appointed by the Bank of Liverpool and Martins last month. Mr. R. C. Thynne, the Chairman, said that since the appointment of the present Board two years ago the unforeseen difficulties with which they had had to contend had been indicated to the shareholders. Those had arisen mainly from lax management, faulty manufacture, bad relationships with customers, heavy administrative and operating costs, large stocks of more or less doubtful qualities, and vexatious litigation. There was a debt of £65,700 to the Inland Revenue, which was accumulating interest of £3,300 per annum.

The Mashonaland Agency proposes to sell its assets, and the market estimate is that the realisation will yield fully 5/6 per 7/6 share. The company owns large land areas and substantial shareholdings in various Rhodesian mining enterprises. For the three financial years, 1917-18 to 1919-20, dividends of 10 per cent. per annum were paid, but nothing has since been distributed.

It is understood that the will of the late Viscount Pirrie will shortly be proved, and it will be found that practically the whole of the estate is left in trust for Lady Pirrie during her life. Another very large payment for death duties is entailed. The executors of the late Viscount have instructed Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley to sell Witley Park at the Hanover square Estate Room by auction in the autumn.

The response to the recent offer of 400,000 £1 shares by Jamaica Sugar Estates has been very meagre. Only 250,000 of the shares were underwritten, and only about a quarter of that number have been subscribed, the underwriters having to take about 77 per cent. of the amount they underwrote. That means that only about £60,000 was subscribed by the public.

During the first quarter of this year 495 ounces of platinum, valued at over £10,000, were obtained as a by-product from nickel-copper ores mined in Ontario, Canada.

Over 81 per cent. of the gold produced by the gold mines of Canada comes from Northern Ontario. One Ontario gold mine has already produced gold to the value of £15,000,000.

Conditions were rather more comfortable in Lombard street yesterday, notwithstanding the large diminution in market resources disclosed by the Bank return. There was less demand for loans, and after paying 3 p.c. in the morning, borrowers were able to obtain accommodation in the afternoon at 2¼-2½ p.c. until to-day. Both day-to-day and weekly fixtures were being renewed at 2½ p.c. The absence of any change in the Bank rate and the easier tendency of money caused a little more inquiry for bills, but there was no disposition to let rates slip in the Discount market. Fine three months' bills were quoted at 3 5-16-3⅜ p.c. and second-hand Treasuries were still on offer at 3 5-16 p.c. No buying of short bills was reported on the part of the banks.

Gold was 2d. per ounce lower at 95s. Silver further rose ⅛d. per ounce for both spot and forward delivery to 34⅝d. and 34 11-16d. respectively.

A slightly better tendency characterised the foreign exchange market yesterday on the improved political situation. Francs at one time rallied to 84.70, but reacted a little to 85.10-85.15. Belgian francs being 96½-96¾ after 95⅞. Sterling remained in the ascendant following the overnight rise in New York, the rate further improving to 4.34 5-16-4.34 7-16 dollars. Dutch currency was steady at 11.49½-11.50. Italian lire weakened to 101⅞-102⅛ and Spanish pesetas to 32.83-32.86. Scandinavian exchanges were dull, but Swiss francs appreciated to 24.08-24.10. Austrian crowns were 305,000-310,000, with Poland 22.50-22.55 zloty. Argentine dollars were not so firm at 40 11-16-40⅞, and Brazilian milreis experienced a set back to 5 5-32-5 11-32. Eastern rates were steady, rupees being 1s 5 5-32d.-1s. 5⅛d., and Japanese yen 1s. 11d.-1s. 11 1-16d. The following are closing quotations:—

BANK RETURN.

Repayments by the market to the Bank of England are indicated by a reduction of nearly £2,550,000 in the other securities, and by the Government to the Bank of England by a reduction of over £6,000,000 in the Government securities. The public deposits are £1,813,000 down, and there is an increase of over £500,000 in the reserve, so that the private deposits on the week show a reduction of a little over £29,250,000. The total is reduced to £110,875,468, which is within £2,000,000 of the amount on June 25, though compared with that on June 4 it shows a reduction of £17,000,000. The other securities at present are almost identical in amount with the total on June 4. The reserve has been increased to a shade under £20,750,000, and, owing to the heavy diminution of the deposits, its proportion to liabilities is nearly 4 higher at 17⅝ p.c.

LONDON WOOL SALES.

At the public sale of wool in London yesterday four catalogues were offered jointly, totalling 9,867 bales, and comprised 2,228 bales New South Wales and Queensland, 1,095 Victorian, 531 West Australian, 114 South Australian, 95 Tasmanian, 4,671 New Zealand, 768 Cape, 250 English slipes. Good competition continues for the better qualities of merino, and also cross-breds, and prices on balance show no material change. New South Wales and Queensland, greasy merino combing, 27d. to 37½d.; broken, 30½d. to 33d. Victorian, scoured merino, 38d.; pieces, 42d.; lambs, 29d. to 53d.; comeback, 30d.; greasy merino combing, 35d. to 42½d.; comeback, 40½d.; cross-bred 16½d. West Australian, greasy merino combing, 30d. to 35d.; necks, 28½d. to 32d.; pieces, 25d. to 30d.; bellies, 19d. to 23½d. Tasmanian, greasy merino combing, 37d. to 40d.; fleece, 37½d. New Zealand, scoured half-bred, 43½d. to 52½d.; pieces, 28½d. to 49½d.; bellies, 49½d.; cross-bred lambs, 29d. to 32d.; greasy half-bred, 30d. to 30½d.; cross-bred, 18½d. to 26d.; do. lambs, 18½d. to 25½d.; washed cross-bred, 10½d. to 13½d.; slipe, half-bred lambs, 21½d. to 34½d.; cross-bred do., 19d. to 29½d. English slipe clothing, 29d. to 34d.; quarter-bred combing, 31½d.; half-bred do., 22½d.

In the London Bankruptcy Court on Wednesday, the examination of M. Beary, the jockey, was again adjourned, and an order was made on the debtor to attend on the Official Receiver. The liabilities are returned at £8,627, and the assets at £300. Beary attributes his failure to damages and costs awarded against him in a recent law case, and to losses on a stud farm.

PRODUCE AND FOOD.

CATTLE.

DUBLIN METROPOLITAN CATTLE, North Circular road Thursday.—There was a quiet and uneven trend in trade on our market this morning, and a more or less downward tendency in values, due to bigger supplies. However, for choice cattle, handy-weight wether, fat sheep, and prime small, well-meated lambs, prices did not quotably vary from last Thursday, but for secondary and rougher descriptions of stock there was much more irregularity in rates, owners being at a distinct disadvantage. The market ran into a late hour of the day. Good attendance of cross-Channel buyers, but Scotch support was narrow and North of Ireland also below usual strength. Restrictions now practically withdrawn upon debarkation of cattle from Ireland in Scotland, and also for Canadian cattle. Manchester is reported to be re-opening on Monday next, the 14th inst. Several lamb shippers were buying here to-day for that market.

	Numbers on Offer This week as compared with last.		Corresponding weeks of
			1923.	1922
Beasts	3,955—increase	529	3,327	4,235
Sheep and lambs	10,759—increase	1,649	10,323	14,140
Veal calves	8—increase	3	5	1

Prime heavy cattle were at a disadvantage to negotiate, as there were few buyers for them: they proved hard to cash around 50s. per cwt. But choice qualities of handy-weighted cattle, say, 8½ cwt. to 10½ cwt., were in good demand for local consumption, and these figured at from 52s. 6d. to 54s., and occasionally 55s. or 56s. per cwt., live weight—again with a preferential sale for heifer class. Market is still somewhat above a safe workable margin for exporters. Really good commercial cattle could be purchased shortly after opening of market inside 48s. to 50s. or 51s. per cwt. Still, these figures seem to be somewhat of a misfit when freight, insurance, and other expenses are reckoned with. More ordinary and rougher sorts of cattle may be quoted from 38s. to 47s. 6d., according to character. Local butchers were in quest of nice, young heiferish descriptions of fat cows. For these, up to 42s. 6d. and 44s. per cwt., live weight, was paid, but trade was slow for other sorts of fat cows, with practically no shipping. Prices in the circumstances were irregular and anywhere from 26s. to 38s. per cwt. on foot.

The ovine market was of an in-and-out nature. Prime wether sheep scarce, and went near last day's money; hoggets hardly so dear, whilst ewe sheep were somewhat of a drug and rather sharply depressed where sales were practicable. For the general run of hoggets prices were from, say, £3 5s. to £4 5s. and £4 10s. apiece. It would be a very nice quality sheep that would pass the latter figure. Ewes quoted anywhere from £3 10s. to £5, and £5 5s. in the main. For choice qualities of mutton prices were around 12d. to 13d. per lb., and medium sorts 10½d. to 11½d., whilst coarse and rougher descriptions anywhere from, say, 8½d. to 9½d. or 10d. per lb. In the early stages of market there was a good demand for prime small fat qualities of lambs: these were readily cashed at perhaps a little more money than last Thursday; but for the majority of lambs prices were less, and trade more tedious, although ultimately a tolerably good clearance was made at current rates. Heavy and rough descriptions of lambs fell 3s. to 5s. per head, and smaller, lean sorts 2s. to 3s. worse. For best run of lambs prices were 50s. to 65s. each, and big types up to 70s., 71s., and 72s. apiece. Small and thin lambs went anywhere from 26s. to 44s. and 46s. and 48s. each. Veal calves a very small and unimportant feature of market.

YORK, Thursday.—No English store cattle offering, and very few Irish, chiefly fresh heifers. Dairy cows a fair show, but trade decidedly worse, with a fall in price of newly-calved cows of £3 to £4 per head, best price being £38. Few sheep forward, but though trade was quiet, prices were rather better.

BRISTOL, Thursday.—Beef in good supply; best, 106/- to 108/- per cwt., dead weight; mutton, 15d. to 16d. per lb.; lamb, 20d. to 21d. Few store cattle offered. Trade steady. All sold at late rates. Milch cows, £20 to £28; best up to £30.

BIRMINGHAM, Thursday.—Pigs in short supply, with a good demand, values being firm all round, and more money being asked for smalls and sows. Sizeable bacons, 16/- per score dead weight; cutters, 14/- to 15/-, and sows, about 10/-, occasionally a little less.

GLASGOW MARKET REPORT, Wednesday.—Hegarty and Kelly, 275 Duke street, Glasgow, report limited supplies of fat cattle in to-day's market. For all classes a steady trade was experienced at late quotations. Sheep and lambs were a small show, and met an improved demand. At Merklands Wharf the firm presented a large show of Irish store cattle. With fewer customers present, a slow dragging trade was experienced. Telegrams: "Hegarty, Glasgow."—(Advt.)

DUBLIN DAIRY CATTLE (North Circular road), Thursday.—There were just 350 springers and milchers marketed here. Trade proved very slow and disappointing throughout. Heifer milchers and springers for Easter found much as before, nevertheless, for the right breed and type, say, £25 to £30 and £32 each. Scotch class of cows were bid for at discouraging terms—viz., £28 to £30, only an exceptional class stocker occasionally exceeding latter figure. Local dairymen continue hard to fit in class of cow at a price. Their selections were from £23 to £25 and £26 each. Small and doubtful descriptions of cows £12 to £16 and £17 each.

DUBLIN PIG (North Circular road), Thursday.—The entries of swine for sale on this market were practically a repetition of previous numbers—viz., 878 exhibits. There was a fair attendance of buyers, but trade followed a slow and cautious routine. However, business and prices showed no great variation from last Thursday's position. Really choice heavy bacon hogs occasionally went up to 75/- to 77/6 and 80/-, but generally 75/- to 76/- may be reckoned about top of market in the main. There continues to be a considerable proportion of half-finished and small stortish hogs coming in, and there are selling relatively dear, although far from a profitable level to recoup feeders. Sow pigs also entail big losses to feeders, and are difficult to cash around 40/- per cwt. The irregularity of prices and varied character of pigs to be dealt with leave values generally much impossible to classify.

GLASGOW MERKLANDS WHARF, Monday.—With 900 Irish fat cattle and the meat market depressed, trade was bad, prices receding 40/-. Best bullocks and heifers, 58/- to 62/- per cwt.; secondary, 50/- to 56/-; cows and bulls only moderate demand. Increased supplies of lambs, and trade also depressed. Prices, 15d. to 18d. Wednesday.—Larger number of stores, but although there was a good attendance of buyers, the pending alteration of the Ministry's regulations restricted competition, and trade was slow and disappointing.—(Advt.)

GRAIN.

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES.—BALTIC, Thursday. WHEAT Cargo market firm, but generally quiet. LIVERPOOL, Thursday.—WHEAT—The American Bureau report was considered bearish, but with the sharp rise in Winnipeg and Chicago forward deliveries of wheat here showed no quotable change at the commencement of operations. A good demand was afterwards experienced, partly from shorts to cover, and with scarcity of sellers values gradually moved upwards, and though not finishing quite at best owing to disappointing late cables, showed a substantial rise on the day. C.i.f. parcels dearer. No. 1 Manitoba afloat sold at 50/-, July-August 49/10½ to 50/-, October-November 48/4. No. 3 afloat 47/7½. Australian afloat 49/10½. Rosario-Santa Fe afloat 47/9 to 48/3. Sales covered July at 68/6, 68/6, 69/3, 69/6, September 70/- to 70/6, October 71/3 to 71/6, and August quoted 69/6 to 69/9 per cwt. LIVERPOOL, Thursday.—Irish and Danish BACON in moderate demand at about late prices. Canadian Wiltshires firm, but not specially active. The market for American bacon here is firm in most departments, holders being encouraged by the strength in Chicago, but no quotable change is made in values of any descriptions. Wiltshires, bellies and Cumberlands meet a fair demand, and the two latter, especially bellies, are now getting into small compass for fresh parcels. HAMS firm for fresh landed meats, with a good demand stimulated by the fine weather, and short cut 1/- dearer at 91/- to 99/- per cwt. Shoulders also firm and fairly active at late currencies. LARD on the spot, following a sharp rise in Chicago, is raised 1/6 to 1/9, prime steam being now at 67/- to 67/6 and American refined 68/- to 69/- per cwt. CHEESE quiet at about late rates; New Zealand quoted 92/- to 95/- per cwt. BUTTER firm for Danish and quietly steady for other makes at late prices. PRODUCE.

LONDON, Thursday.—SUGAR—The market is generally quieter, though there is a fair trade doing on preserving account, while there is no new development in the situation as a whole. Offers of American at the moment are more numerous. British descriptions received moderate support at previous rates, with the exception of gran. mineral water and crystals, which were reduced 6d. per cwt. Messrs. Tate and Lyle's cubes quoted 43/3½ to 43/3, crushed 40/6, nibs 43/3, and gran. stored unchanged at 40/1½. Fine 1942 coarse now rule at 38/10. THE DUBLIN PIGEON "DERBY."

THE PENZANCE RACE.

What may be regarded as a "Derby" in its own particular sphere took place on Saturday last from Penzance. It was the occasion of the liberation at this Cornish town of racing pigeons, who had to negotiate 140 miles of the Atlantic. The race was under the auspices of the Dublin Federation of Homing Societies, and was a great success.

Liberated at 9.10 a.m. in fine weather, wind west, the birds got well away, and seemed to "strike" their line of flight straight away. At 3.40 p.m. the first arrivals were reported at Ranelagh, Dublin. The next best time was around 5 p.m., and from that onwards birds kept arriving. The following are the times of the arrivals on Saturday:—C. Corbett—5h. 39m. 48s. p.m., and 6h. 7m. 10s.; McDonnell—5h. 40m. 27s. Scullion—5h. 38m. 43s.; Brady—6h. 40m. 40s.; Crone—6h. 43m. 0s.; Gray—6h. 44m. 45s.; Kenny—6h. 40m. 40s.; Duffy—6h. 49m. 52s.; Bannister—6h. 42m. 28s.; Morgan—7h. 10m. 57s.; Smith—7h. 15m. 57s.; Crone—7h. 5m. 0s. (2 birds); Ingle—9h. 10m. 42s.; O'Kelly—9h. 55m. 0s. and 9h. 56m. 30s. (These birds were disqualified, as they were not reported to club secretary within two hours of their arrival.) Arrivals on Sunday:—O'Kelly—9h. 18m. 12s. a.m.; Vernon—9h. 42m. 8s. a.m.; Cloke-Reynolds—1h. 30m. 50s. p.m.

CYCLING.

IRISH ROAD CLUB.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Southern Branch of the Irish Road Club, held last evening, the suggestion of the Northern Branch that the contest for the Rudge-Whitworth Cup should be held on August 23rd, was adopted. The series was resumed last year, when the Northern Branch won the contest held in the Dublin district, supplying the individual winner as well. In order to aid in the selection of a team to represent the Southern Branch in the race, a fifty miles members' handicap has been arranged for Saturday week, the 19th inst. Owing to motor cycle speed trials being held on part of the new course, it may be necessary to revert to the old straight-away course on the Navan road for this event. The cup presented by the Dunlop Co. will be put up for competition for the first time.

DESCRIPTIVE PARTICULARS.

The Premises are situate in the Bull Ring, being the most central part of the Main street (the principal business thoroughfare) of Wexford, and the business is one of the oldest established in the Town of Wexford. The Premises, which are very extensive, require no outlay, a considerable sum having been expended on them in recent years. There is a large Shop, most suitable for the extensive Wholesale and Retail Grocery Trade, which has been carried on for over 50 years; also a Bar separated from the Grocery Shop, but communicating therewith by a doorway, and having a separate entrance from Cornmarket, so that no alteration would be required to comply with the requirements of the proposed Licensing Bill. Adjoining the Bar is a store, which could be utilised in enlarging the Bar if required. This store communicates by means of a trap door with the extensive and commodious cellars underneath, consisting of Washing Cellar with Boiler and Bottle Racks, Beer, Porter, and Wine Cellars, all admirably equipped with Bins, Racks, etc. Over the Store leading from the Bar there are two dry goods lofts, and adjoining the latter commodious tea lofts. The residential portion of the premises comprises kitchen and drawingroom on the first floor; on the second floor diningroom, 2 bedrooms, and w.c., and on the third floor 3 additional bedrooms.

No Auctioneers' Fees will be charged to Purchaser.

Proposals for purchase by Private Contract will be received by the Official Assignee up to the hour of Twelve o'clock, noon, on the 22nd day of July, 1924. If an offer be made which can be recommended by the Vendors, it will be submitted to the Court for approval without further notice.
